Rumania Prepares To Defy Axis and Hungary

Nazis Threaten To Send Army Into Country

Two German Motorized Units Are Reported at Border Town.

By the Associated Press.
BUCHAREST, Rumania, Sept. 2.—Definite military plans are being made for armed resistance to Hungarian occupation of Transylvania, it was learned tonight.

At the same time this was learned on high authority, unconfirmed reports circulated in government quarters that two units of German motorized troops had arrived at the border town of Sighet.

Yesterday's riotous anti-Axis demonstrations in Bucharest and Brasov brought two stiff notes from Berlin, demanding explanation of attacks on Germans and lack of internal order in Rumania.

Already, a semi-official German threat to occupy all of Rumania with Nazi troops unless the anti-Axis agitation is curbed had spurred Rumanian authorities to hustle hundreds of demonstrators into concentration camps.

Wilhelm Fabricius, German minister to Rumania, conferred today with the new Soviet Russian minister, Arkady I. Lavrentieff.
It was reported unofficially that they discussed a secret note which Russia is said to have sent to Berlin, asking "clarification" of a German guarantee to protect Rumania militarily.

Hungarian Seizures.
This pledge was made last week when Germany and Italy ordered Rumania to agree to yield half of Transylvania to Hungary.

Russia on the first of July took over Bessarabia and the northern Bucovina from Rumania.

At Sighet and Satu Mare and many other towns in Transylvania, hastily formed Hungarian armed forces—residents of Transylvania —took over communications, transportation services, military posts and other strategic points, although a mixed commission on the territorial transfer has ordered the occupation to begin on Thursday.

The Rumanian peasant leader, Juliu Maniu, and his close friends are reported now in Cluj, ancient capital of Transylvania, organizing for military resistance of the Hungarian occupation.

General To Resist.
Ion Dargolina, one of Rumania's ranking generals, who headed a military mission to a previous Rumanian-Hungarian territorial conference, which broke down, sent word to Bucharest from the Transylvanian frontier that he and the men of his command would resist
Hungarian occupation.

General Mihai Corniciu, former minister of war, informed the general staff that his men on the border were eager to fight and

DAM-SIDE CHAT—That moment for which they've all been waiting has arrived. The President is speaking.
In the presence of a giant, sprawling crowd, President

Roosevelt from his automobile seat dedicates Chickamauga dam, near Chattanooga, and the entire system of dams built by the Tennessee Valley Authority along the far-flung reaches of the Tennessee river and its tributaries. Superstructure and backwater of Chickamauga dam are shown at the sides and in the rear.

Men 'Crash' Labor Day Parade, Drag 'Hitler' Down Peachtree

Effigy of Dictator Draws Laughs From Spectators; Crowd Cheers When Picture of Roosevelt

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE.

Americanism, politics, and the bond issue shared honors with labor yesterday as more than 3,000 persons paraded down Peachtree street for "labor's" day. To many Atlantans who found their pleasure at mountain resorts—or bathing in the surf of near-by beaches, it was a national holiday; but to these unionized workers it was a day of responsibility and privilege.

Floated swathed in vari-colored crepe paper rolled along the streets as groups of uniformed workers marched in the 60-minute-long parade to display respect to their organizations, to show their patriotism, and to support city issues which they consider of great importance at the present time.

Hitler in Effigy.
A group of six men, dragging an effigy of Hitler, stole the show as they "horned" in to add their bit of patriotism to the celebration. This effigy caused policemen to be called "Fifth Columnists" when they asked the prankster-patriots to leave the streets with their "Nazi dictator." But they paraded, undaunted.

Then came a large portrait of President Roosevelt.
Hitler got the laughs; Roosevelt the applause.
Everyone was on hand for this celebration—everyone from small children who stretched their arms upward to cling to a father's palm, to old men and women who limped slightly after marching for blocks or who mopped their sweating brows as they continued their trek. Sidewalks were lined with spectators, not numbering as many as the crowds which witnessed the Gable-Leigh parade or the Baptist group last summer; but many members of labor supported families, and visiting out-of-townners waited in the midday sun to witness this display of unionism and patriotism.

Johnson Speaks.
In a morning radio address which opened the celebration, Dewey L. Johnson, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, stressed the importance of unionized labor as a cog in the main wheel of defense measures. He pointed out that every organized worker is possessed of patriotism and loyalty and said that labor organizations and their members will do their part to promote any measures in a national emergency.

Albert W. Gossett, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, traced the value of organized labor to civic, fraternal, medical, educational, religious and patriotic groups, in his radio address.
"The Atlanta Federation of Trades is manifesting today its determination to have no dictatorship of any kind," Gossett said.
"It is marching in a body as evidence of our desire and determination to remain a free people in a free republic, living and working out our destiny in a democracy that must and shall survive."
Organized workers continued their celebration at 8 o'clock last night with a dance at the city auditorium. A beauty contest to name "Miss Atlanta Federation of Trades" and a jitterbug jam session were highlights of this affair.

stories on Labor Day speeches of Green and Lewis, will be found on

Pack of British Fighters Stop Germans Cold

RAF Pilots Dart Out of Blinding Sun to Pounce on 1,000 Planes.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(P)—British fighter planes, teamed with anti-aircraft gun crews, four times today turned back massive German aerial formations seeking to rain death and destruction on the empire capital.

(One thousand German planes smashed at London, the United Press said.)
The fighter planes darted out of a blinding sun and battered and smashed the close-packed Luftwaffe waves, which included huge four-motored bombers.

The Germans flew in close formation, but anti-aircraft fire forced them to scatter.
Then the fighter planes roared to the attack "like a pack of dogs," and the Germans failed to reach the city proper.

Early tonight, the air ministry said 42 German planes had been shot down to 13 for the British.
Seven pilots were reported safe.
(In Berlin, German sources said 86 British planes were destroyed at a cost of 23 German planes.)
The end of Britain's first year of war found the British facing the future confident that the second would be a "year of victories."
The man in the street sums it up this way:
"They've done their worst and it's our turn now."
The air ministry announced fresh bombing attacks last night against objectives in Germany, Italy and Nazi-occupied Holland and France.
Swinging down upon Italy, it said, the bombers "successfully" blasted at the Fiat factory at Turin and the Marelli magneto works at Sesto San Giovanni.
The end of the first year saw the beginning of a six-day period of high tides favorable to an invasion attempt if the Germans choose to make it now.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept.
2.—Tennessee gave the President the works today — and you couldn't rightly say that he was under wraps, either.

Each in a way was host to the other. The state provided the scene. Rolling and green and sunny mountains all about. Its people gave the hospitality, warm and genuine and—in contrast to the situation abroad—wholly self-respecting. They played the traditional hundred thousand and more to his father Abraham, and did it with gayety and holiday-making.

He, in turn, supplied the occasion—dedication of Chickamauga Dam, sixth of the Tennessee Valley Authority series. His was the gift of the concrete, the steel, the generators, condensers, transmission system and all. He recalled a visit here in January, 1933, with Senator Norris when he said he caught the vision now worked out before the eyes of his fellow-celebrants.

Brings Own Weather.
You might even say he brought his own weather, the Roosevelt luck holding. It was a good thing, too, for Chattanooga and the lakeside were full of people, and the day was equally full of events, starting with a model airplane contest at 8 o'clock and winding up with a street dance in town tonight, as the finale of a three-day celebration.
But his coming quite naturally was the high point.
He looked vigorous and smiled and waved genially when occasion demanded—as often it did—but in repose his face was grave. At the lakeside, reading his address, he sat alone in the rear seat of the specially-built presidential automobile, speaking into the three microphones, the sun pouring down so hotly that mist formed on his glasses, forcing him to remove them.

Mrs. Roosevelt, too, always gracious, was as democratic as the crowd around her on the strongly built stand, the seats all about and the automobile parking space beyond. But the burden of great international events seemed suggested also in her manner.

Two Warlike Notes.
There were but two warlike notes—the uniforms of four troops of the Sixth Cavalry, National Guardsmen and hundreds of city, state and TVA policemen, and the President's reference to defense industries "more safe from attack in this region behind the mountains than if they were located on our more exposed borders."

Georgia's nearness to the scene was implicit in the inclusion of Governor Rivers—present with the state's first lady and Highway Commissioner L. L. Patten and Mrs. Patten—in his salutation.
Hatless and a little weary from an early journey from Atlanta to reach here by 8:30 o'clock, the Governor availed himself of the occasion's informality to sit gratefully in semishade on a low stone runner near the dam, where he found beside him—of all persons—Secretary Harold Ickes, plump but comfortable under a broad-brimmed panama.
Big-time Washington figures were all over the place. There

Preparedness 'In a Thousand Ways' Is Urged

President Calls for Spirit of the Pioneer, Modern Arms.

By the Associated Press.
NEWFOUND GAP, Tennessee-North Carolina Line, Sept.
2.—President Roosevelt sternly informed the American people tonight that to remain free they must steel themselves for sacrifices, achieve absolute national unity, and "prepare in a thousand ways" to defend their country and their liberties.

"The greatest attack that has ever been launched against freedom of the individual," he said, "is nearer the Americas than ever before."

"To meet that attack we must prepare beforehand—for preparing later may and probably would be too late."

Spirit of Pioneer.
The spirit of the pioneer is needed, Mr. Roosevelt contended.
But the nation also needs modern arms and trained men. Dangers far more deadly than the fron-tiersman had to face, he said, can not be met with "pitchforks and squirrel rifles or even with the training or the weapons of the war of 1917 and 1918."

He spoke solemnly, dedicating the Great Smoky Mountains National park to "the free people of America."

Stretching away before him were miles on miles of verdant valleys, and tree-covered peaks wreathed in the fragile wisps of mist from which the mountains got their name.

People from several states gathered to hear the President at a mile high spot on the trans-mountain highway, where Tennessee and North Carolina meet.

Shadows of Dusk.
As the shadows of dusk crept into the valleys and put a chill in the air, Mr. Roosevelt arrived here after a 170-mile train and motor trip from Chattanooga, Tenn., where he spoke this morning.
He emphasized defense and dangers in the earlier speech, too.
In it he dedicated Chickamauga dam and the TVA's system of lakes along the Tennessee valley to the "total defense of the United States of America." And he said that America today faces "a time of peril" unmatched in world history.

Much the same thought was carried over into the address here.
In dedicating 427,000 acres of mountains, streams and forests, he recalled the pioneer days and the danger of Indian attacks.

"Today we no longer face Indians and hard and lonely struggles with nature," he said. "An-also—we have grown soft in many ways."

"If we are to survive, we can

D'Arcy Is Married To Arleen Whelan

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Sept. 2.—(P) Arleen Whelan and Alexander D'Arcy, both of the movies, were married in a hotel suite early today by Judge A. J. Nelson. The couple motored here from Hollywood and started their return trip soon after the ceremony.

Miss Whelan, who was born in Salt Lake City and lived in Colorado and Idaho before coming to California, is 26 and O'Arcy is 31. He is a New Yorker. Miss Whelan, a red-head of the Janet Gaynor type, was a manicurist in a Hollywood hotel when the movies found her.

Cole Submits Qualifications For Tax Post

Credit Man Seeks Election in City Primary Tomorrow.

George A. Cole, Atlanta credit man, yesterday submitted his qualifications for the position of city tax collector, which he will seek at the city primary tomorrow.

Cole is a candidate to succeed R. A. McMurtry, who is not offering for re-election.

A resident of Atlanta for the past 23 years, Cole has served as credit man for two of Georgia's oldest and largest business houses since his return from World War service in the army.

He said he felt these business experiences fit him for the position he seeks because both of them call for experience in handling large sums of money, a thorough knowledge of accounting, honesty and the ability to meet the public courteously.

Cole is a member of the city bond commission, past president of the Atlanta Association of Credit Men, member of the American Legion, a Mason and a Baptist. He lives at 2490 Memorial drive.

Relief Workers Fight Disease In Flood Area

200 Square Miles of N.J. Inundated; Water Rationed.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 2.—(P)—Suffering and the threat of disease were the chief concern of public officials and relief agencies tonight in scores of communities stricken by destructive floods which cost at least five lives in southwestern New Jersey and Delaware.

As the floodwaters from yesterday's torrential downpour receded, Eugene L. Horan, head of the Red Cross in Gloucester county, asked New Jersey health authorities for medical supplies to prevent typhoid fever.

Water was rationed in Woodbury, Gloucester county seat, where the pumping station was flooded. Many Hammonton residents ate cold meals because the flood reached the Glassboro gas plant.

Residents in the five-county Jersey area affected by the flood were warned to boil water contaminated by flood seepage.

Hundreds of families were homeless, more than a score of persons injured and crop and property damage estimated in the millions.

Albert C. Jones, director of Burlington county board of chosen freeholders, said 200 square miles in New Jersey was inundated. He estimated property damage in Burlington county at $2,500,000. Damage was about $1,000,000 in Camden county.

NEW ENGLAND STORM DANGER PASSES

BOSTON, Sept. 2.—(P)—Coast guard headquarters here announced late today "all danger is passed" for New England from the hurricane that had lashed many Atlantic seaboard points in the past few days but warned that shipping in the Bay of Fundy might expect danger during the night.

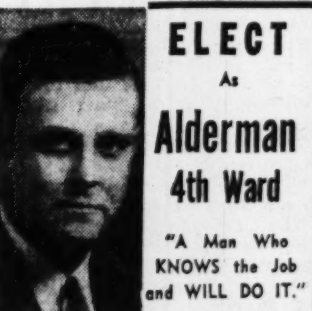

The blow veered seaward this morning, after apparently heading toward southern New England.

Although high tides were reported at various New England points no serious results were noted.

Labor Day Was Really One of Toil for Many Moving Men, Police, Caddies, Hospital and State Patrol Busy.

The wheels of industry stopped turning, and most of the stores were closed, but Labor Day was a day of toil right on for many Atlantans.

It was Labor Day in the literal sense to the moving men who struggled to get some thousands of Atlanta families out of one apartment and into another before midnight and the end of the lease came around.

It was a day of toil for the folks at Grady's emergency clinic who found their work at least a third heavier as victims of auto smashes, battered belligerents who participated in street fights and just plain sick folks who began to roll in.

It was Labor Day for police telephone operators Marion R. Dodd and J. L. Green, and for Radioman Dick Alford, who got four times as many calls yesterday as they got last Monday, when everybody was supposed to be busy.

Hitler's Moustache.
They handled most of them with ease, but they had to labor to figure out the answer when the lady wanted to know "What color is Hitler's moustache?" and when the other lady wanted to know "When London is bombed, do the London police take care of the children?"

It must have been Labor Day for the lady who called police and explained she hadn't seen a parade in four years and would they please send an officer out to look after her kids while she went downtown to see this one? She didn't get much relief, though, for they told her that was a civil case and out of the jurisdiction of the police.

It was Labor Day for the boys of Major Lon Sullivan's highway patrol who kept busy chasing up and down the highway trying to keep people from killing themselves, and it was Labor Day for papa, who tried to shove the family bus through traffic to find some rural picnic grounds.

It was Labor Day for the caddies who toiled in the hot sun as golf bugs thronged the courses, and it was Labor Day for the lifeguards at the municipal pools who strove to keep in safe waters a huge crowd of youngsters bent on one last grand splash before school starts and life becomes real and earnest again.

Game Wardens Busy.
It was Labor Day for Georgia's game wardens who prowled the alder thickets along the trout streams, fishing for those careless ones who sought to wet a fly and take a trout without the formality of buying a license.

It was Labor Day for the street-car men and the trackless trolley operators and the bus drivers, who had to be on duty just as on any other day, and it was Labor Day even for the hosts of labor, who had to walk in the annual parade until their feet hurt and the sweat rolled down their backs, and who then tripped laboriously the light fantastic in a culminating celebration at the auditorium last night.

And it was Labor Day for the newspapermen, who have to work harder digging up stories like this when there's no news breaking than they do when everything is going full blast.

VICHY, France, Sept. 2.—(P)—Digne, the capital of the lower Alps department in unoccupied southeastern France, was heavily bombed early this morning, the official Havas news agency announced tonight.

Fifty bombs were dropped on that important communications center, about 50 miles northwest of the Riviera city of Cannes and approximately 40 miles from the Italian border.

There was heavy damage but no casualties, the agency said. Several fires were started and burned for nearly an hour before they were extinguished.

Navy Command Of Air Forces Held Essential

Stirling Gives Objections to Unified Control of Plane Fleet.

(Editor's Note: Principal opposition to a unified air force, now being advocated, appears to come from naval quarters. Rear Admiral Yates Stirling Jr., U. S. N. (retired), former chief of staff of the U. S. fleet and now United Press naval critic, in the following dispatch explains the navy's need for command over a considerable sea-going air force.)

By REAR ADMIRAL YATES STIRLING JR.

(Copyright, 1940, by United Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—The urge today for a unified air force comes from men who have spent much of their lives in the practical work of flying. Undoubtedly there is an appeal in their claims.

Both the German and Italian air forces are under unified control, which apparently satisfies their particular situation. The Royal Air Force of Britain is a separate arm, under an air ministry, but has made far-reaching concessions to the royal navy by which the navy controls its air arm.

We should not accept blindly the principle of a unified air force merely because some of the great powers have adopted it. If we do, in time of emergency our fleet might be deprived of an essential force upon which victory may depend. The difference between co-operation—sometimes difficult to attain—and command, which the Navy insists upon holding over its own air force, might be the difference between winning or losing a battle. The Navy needs seamen who can fly—not landmen with wings.

Demand Concentration.

The situation in Europe in the war today demands concentration of effort and a single directing control of the air arms of all three belligerents. England must maintain a single directing air control in the battle of the British Isles, but meanwhile its naval air efforts must be carried out in many distant localities where its fleets are operating.

Unlike those nations our sea frontiers are beyond the radius of action of any war air force except it be brought to our coast on board surface warships. By a "war air force" is meant one capable of carrying heavy bombs, in distinction from an air force using up its surplus carrying load in fuel and personnel.

Great Britain has two air threats. The first threat and the most important is that against the British Isles; the second is the threat against the empire and its vital lines of communication. The air needs of the United States are similar to the British Empire needs; at least until an enemy has obtained air bases within striking distance of our great cities and industrial centers.

Important to Fleet.

This war has proved that a fleet air force is of commanding importance to the security and offensive power of the fleet. The training of an air pilot is not very difficult, and is but the beginning of the military and naval air men's education. All recognize today that some of the Navy's personnel must fly in order to win battles on the sea.

The vital importance of trained naval air forces is recognized nowhere more than in the United States Navy. The knowledge of an officer commanding the naval fleet of a nation, in the value and use of aircraft at sea, must be as intimate as his knowledge of the value and use of guns, torpedoes and submarines, and as intimate as his knowledge of tactics of the several types of warships under his command. The airplane has definite functions in the gunnery organizations of warships. It has important duties in scouting. It must protect the fleet from enemy bombers and torpedo planes.

Auxiliary to Fleet.

It seems to be a corollary in naval thought in this country that the naval air force should be developed side by side with the gunnery arm, the torpedo arm and all other naval arms which are required for the efficiency and power of the fleet, and, therefore, that a proper proportion of the personnel of the Navy should be trained for air duties, just as is the case for the other arms, and that all these arms should be under the undivided and supreme control of naval authorities. We do not hear of claims being made for the establishment of a separate department for the submarine, nor for the torpedo, nor the cruiser, nor the destroyer.

It seems then illogical to establish a separate department for the airplane which, after all, as far as the navy is concerned, can only be an auxiliary weapon of the fleet.

The naval aviator's usefulness does not depend so much on his ability to fly as it does to his thorough understanding and loyalty to the fleet's tasks and the part he must play in them.

Do Ship Routine.

A naval aviator, in addition to his flying duties, must take his turn in ship routine, standing watch on the bridge and engine room, performing duties in gun turret, at broadside guns and in the fire control. The navy desires to prevent its aviators from getting out of touch with naval problems.

At sea special knowledge of navigation and in locating ships at sea is much more difficult than on land, where land marks are always available to anyone who can read a chart. The naval aviator must distinguish types of ships, one from the other, in all kinds of weather and his navigation must be ever so much more accurate than the flyer over land, for his points of reference are ever moving and often at high speed. Such objects as battleships, cruisers, flotillas of destroyers, convoys and enemy fleet must be as recognizable to the naval pilot as railways, churches, factories and troops are to an army pilot.

Fallacy Old One.

There is one argument advanced by the advocates of the united air force, which is, that only air-men are competent to give directions to air forces. This fallacy that a specialist is required in the directing of air forces in co-operation with other weapons is an old one. Oftentimes a specialist has a narrow outlook and may be of less value than a man, not a specialist, having a wider experience, and more capable in his understanding of how to co-ordinate specialists and cause them to act in unison.

The unified air force idea implies co-operation, a most difficult thing to achieve. Co-operation between the army and navy has ever been difficult in war because of their different outlooks. With a unified air force there will be three things to co-ordinate in co-operation, the army, the navy and an independent air service.

Similar Systems.

Both Great Britain and Japan, each a great sea power, has a system more or less similar to our own. The separate system, where the navy commands its air force, appears to me to fit our needs in hemisphere defense, which will be the major duty of the navy. Japan seems to recognize the greater benefit of a separate air force for its navy, for its hemisphere defense setup in the Orient is similar to ours in the Americas.

It has been claimed, with some truth, that the army and navy have competed against each other for the purchase of airplanes; and cannot agree on standardized types, which would materially increase output. It is also claimed that each has its system for the training of pilots. This is unfortunate in our rush to be prepared in the air, but a drastic change in our present setup which is being advocated to correct these administrative faults, would not seem to balance the loss to both services of the experience by aviators trained in the problems of each of the two services.

The loss of command by these services over their air forces cannot be compensated even by the establishment of a system for better methods of standardization and purchase. After all effective operation of air forces is what we are after. Co-operation cannot take the place of command.

Generally Fair Sky Is Expected for Today

Atlanta's sky will continue today to be generally fair, with a maximum temperature of 86 degrees, the weatherman predicted last night.

Low for today is expected to range around 68 degrees, which is three degrees above Monday morning's temperature. High for today is the same as yesterday.

WHY C. L. CHOSEWOOD WILL BE Re-Elected

BECAUSE the people of his home ward have consistently re-elected him to Council by large majorities, and always over the opposition of one of the same opponents now hoping to fool the people in a city-wide race.

BECAUSE Mr. Chosewood is now serving you honestly and efficiently in Council, where he holds important committee appointments, and has worked with the present Administration in solving successfully the problems it faced.

BECAUSE Mr. Chosewood is Chairman of the new Prison Committee, which changed the rotten conditions at your Prison Farm, installed a non-political superintendent and introduced humane and modern methods which have brought praise from civic clubs and newspapers.

Mr. Chosewood will carry the First Ward, his home ward, by a large majority. We, his friends and neighbors, ask you to make it unanimous.

not be soft in a world in which there are dangers that threaten Americans — dangers far more deadly than were those the frontiersman had to face.

Earth Has Shrunk.

"The earth has been so shrunk by the airplane and the radio that Europe is closer to America than was one side of these mountains to the other when the pioneers toiled through the primeval forest."

"The arrow, the tomahawk and the scalping knife have been replaced by the airplane, the bomb, the tank, and the machinegun. Their threat is as close to us today as was the threat to the frontiersman when hostile Indians were lurking on the other side of the gap."

To meet the threat, the chief executive asserted, he and congress were establishing by law an inherent obligation of citizens to serve defense through training in many capacities. And to that reference to conscription legislation he added a hint that men might be asked to leave their homes and women to give the men to the service of the nation.

"We must prepare in a thousand ways," Mr. Roosevelt declared. "Men are not enough, they must have arms. They must learn how to use those arms."

Skilled Leaders.

"They must have skilled leaders—who must be trained."

"New bases must be established to enable our fleet to defend our shores. Men and women must be taught to create the supplies that we need. And we must counter" the agents of the dictator within our country."

PROGRESSIVE

Then a few moments later the President asserted: "We, in this hour, must have absolute national unity for total defense."

"It is not a change from 'the American way of life,' he said, to advocate or legislate a greater and a speedier preparedness. 'It is,' he averred, 'a positive protection to the American way of life. We know that in the process of preparing against danger we will not have to abandon and we will not abandon the great social improvements that have come to the American people in these later years."

"We need not swap the gain of better living for the gain of better defense. I propose to retain the one and gain the other."

At Chattanooga, the President spoke from the crest of Chickamauga dam, which blocks the waters of the Tennessee river eight miles above the city. He spoke to the nation by radio and to a crowd stretched along the sides of the dam and overflowing onto a fleet of pleasure boats.

170-Mile Trip.
Then, by train and automobile, the chief executive set out on a 170-mile trip to Newfound Gap, on the Tennessee-North Carolina boundary, to dedicate the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in a second, major, Labor Day address.

For citizens up and down the river valley, Mr. Roosevelt's Chickamauga dam speech was the climax of a four-day Tennessee valley celebration.

Thousands cheered the President along the festooned streets of Chattanooga, liberally plastered with Roosevelt and Wallace political placards, and patrolled by men of the 6th Cavalry, a mechanized unit from Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia.

Withering Sun.
Seated in an open car beneath a withering sun, the President dedicated the dam and "great lakes of the south" to:

"The benefit of all the people, the prosperity they have stimulated, the faith they have justified, the hope they have inspired, the hearts they encourage—the total defense of the United States of America."

The operation of the Tennessee Valley authority, the chief executive declared, supplies a demonstration "of what a democracy at work can do, of a people uniting in a war against waste and insecurity."

"There were and are those," he went on, "who maintain that the development of the enterprise that lies largely in this state is not a proper activity of government. As for me, I glory in it as one of the great social and economic achievements of the United States."

Time of Peril.
"Today we are facing a time of peril unmatched in the history of the nations of the world, and because we are undertaking the total defense of our nation, the Tennessee Valley region has assumed, in addition to its own domestic betterment, its share of responsibility for national defense."

Further expansion may be expected in the valley, Mr. Roosevelt predicted, since new defense industries would be sure behind its sheltering mountains than on the country's more exposed borders.

In that development, he assured, the "great gains" made in recent years "for human social security" not only will be retained but also improved and extended.

Mr. Roosevelt said "misplaced emphasis" which many people placed on the government's objectives in undertaking the TVA program offered the basis for the "only note of sorrow" that might properly be sounded today.

He told how engineers had figured that $100,000,000 annually could be saved in flood damage, erosion, electric rates and in agri-group of young women whether Paul McNutt, of Indiana, was more handsome than the well-featured, graying but dashing Captain Daniel J. Callaghan, the President's naval aide. Stephen Early, presidential secretary, moved about unostentatiously, but Brigadier General Edwin Watson, another secretary, in correct uniform and decorations, caught many an eye.

Tennessee Notables.
Tennessee notables were not lacking, among them Senator Kenneth D. McKellar and Tom Stewart, Governor Prentice Cooper and Mayor E. D. Bass, of Chattanooga. For the TVA there were on hand David Lilienthal, James Lawrence Fly, now of the Federal Communications Commission but formerly of the authority, Colonel T. D. L. Robinson, considerate chairman of the press reception committee and scores of other officials. R. E. Biggers served as head of the celebration.

Although every important downtown street along the eight-mile route to the dam was roped off, and every outlying crossroads had an alert cavalry guardsmen—no needless exaction was imposed on the cheering thousands. The route extended in part through the older sections of the town, and here the occasion took on something of the nature of a purely neighborhood visit.

Small children, old women, people in slacks, comfortable householders of every sort, sat on their lawns or stood along the sidewalks before their homes and cheered their chief executive with warmth but wholly without the manner and expression so often seen in newsreels of similar occasions overseas.

Campaign Cards.

A few campaign cards were nailed to telephone posts and fences. They were small, showing the President's face and that of Vice Presidential Candidate Henry Wallace. But they might have been aspirants for city council. Two cards were nailed on one-quarter of a not overly-large auction announcement.

It was impressed upon the occupants of the presidential party cars, over and over, that the south still has its democracy. Even the northern and eastern industrial sections of America exhibit a certain tenseness and officiality in such events that was not to be discovered here.

He stayed a little less than three hours, going on to another dedication, that of New Found Gap, a national park, near the North Carolina line. He was greeted with, first, the bugle call of "Attention," by a cavalry trumpeter as the train slowly backed into the terminal station, with the national anthem, while his cavalry guards, his hosts, his party and himself stood at attention, and with "Hail to the Chief" as the TVA band greeted him a little later at the dam.

Bugle Call Noteworthy.
These were noteworthy, especially the bugle call, but to be expected.

But at the close, after the return from the dedication, a poignance swept the crowd as the cavalry band slowly played "Auld Lang Syne" while the train smoothly but without haste rolled from the station.

The whole story was told in far fewer and better words by a culture and forestry through a total investment of about $500,000,000. He drew a burst of applause when he remarked that, incidentally, "no watered stock" was involved.

The money was to be used, he said, to improve navigation, build lakes, prevent erosion, develop power, rebuild soil fertility, reforest millions of acres, improve the social and economic life of the people, create new industries and employment, and bring a larger annual cash return to the average family. Then, amid a roar of cheers, he added:

"Today we see the progress that we have made, that we are making, and that we propose to continue to make. We have come far along the road. In this valley, as in the nation, we do not propose to abandon the goal that is directly before our eyes either by sitting down or by going back."

For labor, on labor's national holiday, Mr. Roosevelt had a tribute to the contribution it had made "to the democracy which we are now preparing to defend."

Speaking of the men who blasted rock, poured tons of concrete and moved mountains of earth for the TVA, he asserted that never once, in the biggest consolidated construction job ever undertaken directly by the national government, had there been a substantial interruption of their tasks.

1,500 German Planes Downed Since June 18

Fighters Have Proved Superior to Enemy, British Declare.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(P)—Approximately 1,500 German planes have been destroyed in the two and one-half months since large-scale raids on England began June 18, the air ministry reported tonight in a review of the first year of air war. Since the war started nearly 2,000 German planes have been shot down, it said.

Probably another 750 German aircraft "will never fly again," the ministry added, contending that "day by day our fighters have proved more than equal to the enemy."

British losses were admitted to be "considerable," but the ministry said the ratio was in Britain's favor and pointed out also that many British pilots are saved even when their machines are lost.

It acknowledged that interception of German night raiders presents many problems, but declared these were being met "with increasing success" with the assistance of searchlight crews, observer corps and anti-aircraft batteries.

Germany never has placed much reliance on night bombing, the ministry observed, yet it foresaw the possibility that night attacks will be increased as part of the rising tempo of operations against Britain.

The Royal Air Force's "steady night bombing of Germany" was declared to have been successful and this was attributed largely to the much-criticized leaflet raids early in the war to points as distant as Prague and Vienna.

These, the ministry said, gave the British fliers an "invaluable knowledge of Germany and an ability to navigate over the country successfully in the worst weather."

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill, with the Rev. Ferguson Wood officiating. Burial will be in West View cemetery.

Italian Port Bombed

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 2.—(P)—Day-long British air raids on the port of Assab, Eritrea, yesterday were reported by a Royal Air Force communiqué tonight.

Port buildings and warehouses were hit in "a series" of attacks, it said, on the Italian port near the narrow strait of Bab El Mandeb, opposite the British protectorate of Aden.

British Raise Age Limits To Fill RAF's Ranks

LONDON, Sept. 2.—(P)—Men up to the age of 31—instead of the present maximum of 28—will now be accepted for training as Royal Air Force pilots if they are physically fit, it was announced officially tonight. "There is no suggestion of a shortage," an authorized source said.

"We still have a great pool of men on which to draw, but there are so many candidates suitable in every respect except age that it was decided to secure their services by pushing it up to 31."

No matter what you wish to buy or rent, a Constitution Want Ad will surely find it. The cost is small and oh, what a time saver!

Labor Day

Labor Day is over. That marks the end of summer—except perhaps in thermometer readings. Schools open next Monday. Summer vacationists are coming home.

Labor Day is principally associated with organized labor—the unions. It is their big day, with parades and picnics and outings.

But it has grown to be far more than that. It has come to be as universally recognized a holiday as Christmas or the Fourth of July. Few besides the "essential" occupations opened their offices or shops yesterday. Newspaper workers—and this is written on Labor Day afternoon—understand the paper must come out, holiday or no holiday. Courts may be closed, markets inoperative, official news sources dry as Sahara—but automobiles will crash and crimes will occur and the war in Europe goes on, without respect to holidays.

There was a time when Labor Day was a novelty. It was like St. Patrick's Day in New York and Boston, when the Ancient Order of Hibernians marched and others looked on with a tolerant smile.

Nobody bestows a tolerant smile on organized labor today, whether it be the AFL or the newer CIO. Organized labor is recognized as a component part of our national life. In the main, differences between capital and labor, employer and employee, have been ironed out. They rather like each other. They have adopted a system of give and take. The boss and the "hiring" are pretty good friends.

One of the best things about Labor Day is that it is set for a Monday—the first Monday in September. That means at least a two-and-a-half-day holiday. For boss and employee alike.

Does the union laborer save up for a trolley ride to somewhere he can take his wife and kids and spend a day by a river bank? He does not. He fills up his automobile tank with gas and lights out for far places. Perhaps that's the reason Labor Day parades and celebrations are not what they used to be. The "sons of toil" can't be bothered to hang around town when they'd rather be in the mountains or on the seashore.

Which is just as it should be.

Needed Investigation

Once again, the Federal Bureau of Investigation is on its way to performing a notable public service. For that efficient organization is investigating the Lobby of the Veiled Ladies.

These are the women who have lined a wall of the visitor's lobby just off the senate chamber in Washington, silently, stolidly and stubbornly protesting enactment of the conscription bill. Saying nothing, but making their presence felt through the heaviness of that silence, they have been like ghosts at a banquet, these 10 middle-aged, black-veiled women who operate under the title of "Mothers of the U. S. A."

These ladies will also be remembered as the group which recently tried to hang Senator Pepper in effigy on the Capitol steps. Which by no stretch of the imagination could be called a motherly act.

The Mothers of the U. S. A. have a headquarters in Washington. The vice president in charge, an energetic blonde with a rapid, flowing vocabulary, denies the organization is a front for Father Coughlin or anyone else. She claims merely that she and the president of the group spontaneously got the idea of this movement and it went to town—from Detroit to Washington.

At this seems innocent enough. The question before the FBI, and through them the entire country, is simply: is it? If these women are sincerely protesting, that is one thing. If they are innocent tools of a Fifth Column mind, that is quite another. At any rate, it gives a feeling of relief to know their status is being unbiasedly inquired into.

Unable to stand the singing of a near-by police quartet, an Oklahoma suspect comes clean. It is what is known in the trade as the fourth degree.

Along northern highways, the goldenrod rears its lovely head, bringing to mind a strange omission from our gallery of fair women—namely, a Miss Hay Fever of 1940.

A Happy Country

"Britain today is a happy country. This is the strangest thing that has happened to us in all this strange year."

So wrote Evelyn A. Montague, war correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, one of England's great newspapers. His article appeared in last Friday's Constitution.

His article is stirring. It is martial. It is confident. It reveals the spirit of Great Britain.

Mr. Montague reviews the years after the first World War. Years of apathy, years of pacifism, years of languid confidence that friendly disarmament would make for peace in Europe. Years of self-delusion.

His story of British unpreparedness is not unlike that of the United States during that quarter-century of peace. It was believed the "war to end all wars" had done just that.

But he rejoices that Germany's taking up arms has united the British people as they have never been united "within the memory of man. The lads of Oxford and Cambridge who a few years ago were declaring they would never fight are piloting airplanes with almost unbelievable daring and success. The English people are enduring hardships and laughing." "Taking it and liking it," Americans would say.

Mr. Montague's article is more than optimistic. It carries a conviction of absolute faith that Britain will triumph.

That is the spirit of England as America learns it from the cables.

The question frequently is asked: "What if Hitler succeeds in landing a huge invading army?"

The English maintain—and most Americans believe—that the British will never surrender. They may be killed, they may be surrounded, they may be overpowered by sheer might. But there are millions of regulars and reservists, and nobody who knows the British believe they will quit.

There is a tradition that years ago someone asked Von Moltke, the great military genius of the Kaiser's Germany, if he had ever mapped out a plan for invading England. He is said to have replied:

"We have worked out 31 excellent plans for landing an army there. But not one for getting it out again."

Congressmen Agree

It will be gratifying to Georgians, in this time of national emergency, to know that the entire Georgia delegation in congress is in support of the compulsory military training measure.

When the final senate vote was taken on the much-discussed Burke-Wadsworth bill, both Senators George and Russell voted for it. And a survey of the Georgia group in the lower house indicates that the vote there will, likewise, be unanimous as far as this state is concerned.

That is in line with the wishes of the people. Two of every three Georgians realize that military training for the young manhood of America, in advance of the possible need, is the only wise and intelligent way. It is impossible to create and to train a modern army overnight. And the world has learned that, once their covetous eyes have fallen upon some innocent, neutral country, the dictatorships don't give that country any time to prepare to resist the aggressors.

During World War No. 1 American boys were sent into front line trenches with less than two months of training. Many of them didn't know, even, the rudiments of marksmanship and, if they did, they didn't know how to keep the mud of the trenches out of their rifles. With the result they were practically weaponless soon after their arrival in those trenches.

We don't want anything like that to happen again. We want our boys, if they have to fight, to know how and not to be slaughtered like so many penned sheep before a mechanized, trained and heartless foe.

That is the reason why, if the time ever comes when America must defend herself on the field of battle, we Georgians want our prospective defenders as well-trained, as well-equipped as humanly possible, in advance.

Despite the loud opposition to the bill in the senate, it was reassuring to find, through the Gallup poll, that the same sentiment which animates most Georgians, is reflected in two-thirds of the people of every state.

Unique among international deals affecting your Uncle Sam is this kind offer of naval bases. Usually the old world horse-trader fails to bring along a horse.

THE WAGON TRAIL TO RECOVERY.

(From the St. Louis Post Dispatch.)

For 10 long years we have been muddling with the muddlers, seeking the royal road to recovery. We tried to believe with Hoover—but could not—that everything was essentially sound. We tried to believe with Roosevelt that all we had to fear was fear, and that the Blue Eagle would carry us to heights never attained under Coolidge. We explored so many false trails and blind alleys that we almost came to the belief that there was no road such as the one we were seeking.

But now, after hearing first Mr. Willkie and then Mr. McNary in praise of the pioneer virtues, all is clear. We need only tear up the railroad tracks and trade our automobiles for a Conestoga wagon (or better still, a Murphy wagon built right here in St. Louis), hitch up the oxen and start down the American way until we reach a fine site for a log cabin. There we shall find booming prosperity without a single Indian to harass us. There is only one drawback. Nobody has given us a good road man of this American way.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

THE ARMY PLANS THE DRAFT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The War and Navy departments have been much criticized for their failure to put on the first of the draftees can be enrolled. In other words, the elaborate draft machinery will be ready to produce the men, if the camps, supplies and training officers are available. Only one miscalculation has been made. Naturally enough, the War Department never envisioned a peacetime draft. A change must be made in its regulations and forms, the deletion of the words, "Our country is at war."

Although the War Department hesitates to discuss its efficiency, for conscription is not yet a law, it is generally known that the state has a well-developed plan, centering on local boards and heading up to the governor and adjutant general. In fact, the army is urging caution on state officials, who are advertising that their local boards have already been selected. The final powers of appointment, under the proposed law, will rest with the President, on recommendation of the state officers, so that nothing can be done officially until the bill becomes law.

$10,000-A-YEAR JOB The War and Navy departments have at their disposal a wealth of experience from the last war. They also have general mobilization programs, of which the draft is a part, and these programs have been regularly revised. So it is perhaps natural that they should be prepared. But if the draft goes without undue hitch, a great many army men will give the credit to Lieut. Colonel Lewis B. Hershey, an unassuming and obscure officer of long experience who is the executive secretary of the joint army and navy selective service committee.

For four years Hershey has been getting ready for the draft day that now seems sure, contacting governors and adjutant generals, devising forms and regulations, mapping the country into 6,500 local districts. For the past few weeks he has appeared before congressional committees, explaining the proposed system, and making a very favorable impression. At the War Department he is a hard-working, serious and well-informed officer. Although he has been in the army almost 30 years, he lacks the great reverence for things military that is so usual in the service. He still thinks in terms of civilians, a qualification that seems necessary for anyone who is to have an important part in drafting them.

Under the terms of the bills before congress, the President will appoint a $10,000-a-year director of the draft. If recent appointments are a criterion, the position will go to an important business man, who will come to Washington with great fanfare, and who will spend weeks learning what his job is all about. If the place were filled, however, on the basis of any kind of career service, there seems little doubt that it would go to Hershey without much serious opposition. A great many people argue that a civilian should be named draft director, but Hershey's viewpoint is far as to remove the usual objections to an army man.

FARMER'S SON The Hershey family came to this country in 1709, migrating from Switzerland to Lancaster, Pa., for religious reasons. They belonged to the Mennonite church, whose members to this day have strong scruples against war, insist on a personally supervised education of their children, and retain the odd custom of wearing clothes without buttons. Colonel Hershey's branch of the family settled in Gorham, N. Y., early in the nineteenth century, but in 1849 his grandfather moved to a farm in Indiana near Angola.

Hershey had the early life of a typical farmer's son. He attended a one-room country schoolhouse called Hell's Point school; was graduated from a near-by high school, and after a few months of higher learning returned home to teach in another country school. But later he varied the routine, returning to Tri-State College and attending Indiana University. Before entering the army he was superintendent of schools in a small Indiana town.

In 1911 he joined the Indiana National Guard, which had the rather quaint custom of electing its officers. Being a popular fellow, he was chosen a lieutenant. He served on the Mexican border and in the World War. Remaining in the service after the war, he had the usual assignments, until four years ago when he was transferred from Hawaii to become the executive officer of the selective service committee. He is married, the father of four children, and noted in army circles for his large fund of very improbable stories.

While the War and Navy departments expect no great dislocation from the draft—an average of only 60 men will be selected from each 30,000 of population to raise the first 400,000—it is essential that a sensible job be done. The War Department plans to use none of the "white feather technique" that so stirred the country at the time of the last war. But a well-informed and wise man is certainly needed as director of the draft.

Gloucester Fishermen.

Fishermen.

Friend was vacationing in Boston and the area thereabouts. And he got into conversation with a couple of Gloucester fishermen.

These men had been following their vacation on the coast, catching the seafood and bringing it in to the great markets. Recently, on the return voyage with a cargo of fish, they had stopped at Halifax, the great Canadian port.

It's a sight worth seeing, the fishermen reported. According to their description no port in the world was ever so busy. Cargo ships so many they can't be counted, moving in, being loaded night and day, and moving out again in an almost steady stream, across the Atlantic. Loaded with food supplies and implements and munitions, they were for England. As well as all the other materials and necessities for the tight, beleaguered little island.

The ships, said the fishermen, enter the inner basin for loading. When they are in, great gates are lowered and closely guarded. Canada is taking a chance on the result of the conquering of fear by some better emotion. Men who have performed wonders in battle were, at first, terribly afraid. But they conquered their fear and became heroes.

In Britain, today, a nation has conquered its fear and is giving the world a display of calm, sacrificial patriotism that will live as a heritage to mankind through all of the centuries to come.

From fear came the appeasers. From fear came the Quislings. From fear comes the "fellow travelers" for the Fifth Columnists.

When a nation conquers fear and boldly faces what has to be done, regardless of present consequences, that nation becomes great.

I wonder if we in America, searching our hearts, could find ways to eliminate unworthy fear. It would add greatly to our national stature if we could.

the other man? And I wonder how many cruelties have been perpetrated because of unreasoning mob fear.

Anyway, I do know this. The physical speaker who works on the physical emotions, fear, after all, is more apt to win the election than the intelligent man who conveys his appeal to the reason of his hearers.

This is not to say most people can't reason; that they are not intelligent. Individually, they are. But mob psychology, which is what you have to appeal to on public issues, seems to be generally lacking in intelligence and responding only to stimulus of the emotions.

When Fear Is Sublimated.

The logical follow on that paragraph about mob emotion, particularly as fear, is that when fear is sublimated, some other emotion substituted, a people, or a mob, rises to heights of achievement that stands for ever after as an inspiration throughout all future history.

All the heroic sagas of mankind have come about as the result of the conquering of fear by some better emotion. Men who have performed wonders in battle were, at first, terribly afraid. But they conquered their fear and became heroes.

In Britain, today, a nation has conquered its fear and is giving the world a display of calm, sacrificial patriotism that will live as a heritage to mankind through all of the centuries to come.

Nazi Schools

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Hitler came to power in 1933. The boy is only 16 years old, so he had attended Nazi schools in Germany ever since he was nine. So maybe, you'd like to know what seven years of Nazi schooling does to a human mind—even to a boy who, because he is part Jewish—might have reason for being skeptical of what the teachers tell him.

"How did they explain that Germans are superior to all the other peoples in Europe?"

"That is because of the ice age," answered the boy.

Since he has been in America only a short time, his English is stiff and school-bookish.

"What did the ice age have to do with it?"

"It was when the ice receded, 2,000 years before Christ—"

"Don't you mean 20,000?"

"No," said the boy firmly. "2,000. I learned this in school."

"But how did this cause Germans to be superior?"

"Because the first part of Europe to become clear was a region which is now on the old frontier between Austria and the Reich."

"What part?"

"The region where the German Fuehrer was born," explained the Jewish boy.

"And after that, the next region to become clear was Prussia. All the rest of Europe was under the ice."

"But why does that make Germany superior?"

"Because since these two regions were first to be thawed out, the German people living in them first learned the use of fire, and how to make weapons for war, and tools to till the soil, so of course their German culture would have to be the oldest and best in Europe."

"But if these things are true, why is it that in England and France and all over the world, it is taught in all schools that civilization first began in Egypt, and that the Phoenicians first developed the alphabet and writing?"

"They explained to us in our school that other nations are jealous of the German people and so teach false history to belittle the Germans, and puff themselves up," said the boy.

"Not Matter Of Liking"

"But did you like it when the Nazis told you that Germans were a superior race, and the Jews far inferior to them?"

"It is not a matter of liking it," said the boy. "You go to school to learn useful things which are true. I am glad I learned this, and why it was, because otherwise I might have had much trouble and not understood."

"Yes, but did you like it?"

"Why should I not like it?" asked the boy. "Since the Germans are superior to all the other peoples in the world, even if the Jews cannot possibly be as good as they are, still we German Jews are superior to Jews from Poland or France or anywhere else in Europe, because we have lived in Germany and learned something of German culture."

Coffins Cause Brawl.

A dispute over who should furnish the coffin for a funeral found its way into court in Paarl, South Africa, following a squabble at the side of the corpse. Mrs. Daphne Petersen was accused of attacking Hendrik van Wyk, manager of a funeral fund. The trouble arose when Katrina Solomon changed her mind after buying a coffin. While preparing the body, Van Wyk was approached by Mrs. Petersen, who said that the funeral had been turned over to her husband, manager of a rival fund. "Chase her out," cried Van Wyk to the people in the house. Mrs. Petersen told the court she felt insulted and pushed Van Wyk aside to get out of the kitchen. She was acquitted.

Name-Picker Baffled.

The owner of a little inn on the Thames in London admits that as a name-picker he is a failure. Before the World War the sign above the door read "The King of Prussia." It was changed in 1915 to "The King of Belgium," but in the light of recent events that is not popular. Now the owner, with apologies to the authorities, is asking for another change of name.

Tax Man Invited.

When the Germans were launching a big attack, a British soldier at the front received a peremptory income-tax demand from home, according to a report received at London. In the first rest period he wrote: "Dear Sir—By all means let us settle this. If you will be so good as to send a representative to meet me here, I shall be very glad to discuss the matter."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE MORNING AFTER. EASTMAN, Ga., Sept. 2.—On the festival day bands begin to play, the handsome young ladies who lead bands begin to step; the floats move by; the barbecue is tasty; the stew delicious, and the speakers never seem to run out of words.

Very few people have a thought about the sweating committee, red-eyed from loss of sleep and worn out from some real work. They make it all possible.

Today Eastman had its first annual Georgia Livestock Festival. It was a tremendous success from any viewpoint. The parade of floats, bands, and pretty girls was one of the best. It was not too long. It was long enough. It did not have a bad float in it. There was barbecue and Brunswick stew for ten thousand persons. There were stands built and there were tables so arranged the ten thousand persons were fed quickly and without any delay. The barbecue was a story by itself.

I went to see it on Sunday night. Eastman had invited ten thousand persons to be its guests for Labor Day luncheon. Farmers had contributed one hundred pigs. During the day the pigs had been made ready to go on the pits. Two pits were dug. When we measured them Sunday night one was 98 feet long and the other 86. Adjacent to each of the long pits were two roaring fires of oak logs. These constantly were fed from two large truck loads of the green wood. A dead oak leaves ashes, not coals. And red coals are necessary for barbecuing.

On the pits were ninety-nine pigs slowly cooking as hot ashes from the fires were slid beneath the wire grills. The melting fat dripped down, hissing in the hot coals or burning out with a quick spurt of flame. So many persons don't understand about barbecue. If correctly cooked it is the best way to eat pork. The fat is cooked out.

The spectacle of the two great fires, the long pits of meat, the sparks flying up into the dark as fresh logs were put on the fires: The men carrying shovels full of the hot coals, was something to remember.

Jack Bates was the chairman of the barbecue committee and his two assistants, who supervised the pits, were Elijah Graham and Ace Vaughan. One never sees a lean barbecue. All three were great advertisers of the art. They worked all night. But food was ready for 10,000 persons.

RIGHT ON THE DOT. The Eastman parade was the very first one I ever saw which began on the dot.

The fire siren sounded and the parade began. H. E. Dickens had done his job well as chairman of the event.

Judging the parade was a task. Selecting the queen was even more difficult. Your correspondent worked with Herschel Lovett, of Dublin; W. L. Bowen, of McRae; Bill Prince, of Atlanta, and Tommie Thompson in this task. The city of Eastman might have won but the city fathers decided they would not give the party and compete for the float. The Hawkinsville Rotary Club was the winner. That was not easy.

Selecting the queen definitely was not easy. With about fifty of south Georgia's loveliest to look at, the judges were groggy from the start.

Long before the final judging was done, the judges were growling at one another. Charges of poor eyesight, bribery and downright inability to know real feminine beauty when it was seen, were made and those about the judges grew pale and drew back to a safe distance as the climax was reached.

At long last Miss Lenora Wright, of the Eastman Lions Club float, was chosen queen with Miss Marion Bush, of the Eastman Coca-Cola float, as alternate. It was most strenuous.

DEFENSE PREPARATION. I liked what Hoyt Brown, State Legion commander, had to say.

He talked of national preparedness and he said that cattle, pigs and the crops of the fields, which Eastman was celebrating in its first annual Georgia Livestock Festival, were just as important as guns and planes.

And of course they are. We are inclined to think of preparedness in terms of shells, guns and planes. But actually the home front is of more importance than the enemy front.

There must be food for the army. There must be meat and vegetables and bread. There must be sugar and milk. The fields of America must supply them.

There must be food for the people at home. The soldiers fight well when fed and armed. They fight even better if they know the people at home are contented and supporting the men at the front with good morale.

The real panic of France began behind the lines and was transmitted to the front. The new concept of war as adopted by Germany is to defeat the people at home before really attacking the army.

It was a good day at Eastman. The program was good. There was not a flaw in the weather or the program. The Lions club and those assisting them did a fine job.

It was in this program to promote livestock in Georgia, the most significant Labor Day program in the history of the state and one which should be much emulated.

Hartsfield Administration

Rich in Constructive Results Says Journal Editorial

Hartsfield Has Made

Splendid Record as Mayor Says Constitution Editorial

THE ADMINISTRATION OF Mayor Hartsfield

has been so rich in constructive results as well as in vital reforms that a large portion of the public must have expected him to be re-nominated without opposition. He and his loyal co-workers have lifted Atlanta's government from a morass of debt to the soundest financial status it has ever known, putting it permanently on a cash basis and abolishing deficits once for all. They have redeemed the Police Department from inefficiency, favoritism, and blighting politics. They have reduced traffic fatalities by more than 52 per cent and are steadily raising the city's record to one of the most gratifying in the whole country, whereas it was formerly among the most deplorable. Mayor Hartsfield has fulfilled his pledges to the people. He has met issues without flinching and has done his duty without favor or fear. He has been progressive, enterprising, sound and just.

On such a record it might have been assumed that he would have no opposition for another term. It is the inalienable right, however, of any citizen who can meet the formal requirements to run for any office, from that of President of the United States to constable. Roy LeCraw, Mayor Hartsfield's opponent in the forthcoming primary, is not to be criticized for exercising this right. But The Journal, speaking in all charity as well as candor, ventures to predict that the effect of the opposition will be to re-elect William B. Hartsfield by the greatest majority ever given a candidate for Mayor of Atlanta.

[REPRINT, ATLANTA JOURNAL,
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1940]

Under Hartsfield's administration Atlanta has been brought from debt and demoralization to the best condition of any city of its size in the Nation.

Let's keep it that way with an overwhelming majority for

During Shanghai Raid
Approximately $150,000 worth of gold bars and other valuables were stolen by four Chinese bandits when they raided the house of Wong Chih-jen, a Chinese broker, in Shanghai, recently. According to the victim, the bandits, three of whom carried Mauser revolvers, broke into his place and threatened him until he showed them where he had 28 gold bars secreted under a pillow.

By Dudley GlassThose Wildflowers Just Don't Know When They're Well Off

This is an item about wild flowers.

What I know about wild flowers, except poison ivy, should be represented by the algebraic x.

But I do know they're the most cantankerous, independent species of flora.

I ought to know. I've dug them up—under orders—with screwdrivers and tire irons and all the tools the car could provide. And brought them home for the rock garden.

And—to show the base ingratitude of the darn things—they refuse to thrive. They'd die first—and do.

On several occasions, because it saved argument—I have climbed half way up Stone Mountain and dug up specimens of this and that, to bring home to plant and nourish.

Those rarities of nature had flourished in a crevice of the granite monolith, imbedding their roots in a half inch of soil blown there by the winds, refreshing themselves by the rains which seeped into their shallow beds.

We brought them home, tucked them tenderly to bed in a spot resembling their habitat. We fertilized them, we watered them, we sat up of nights with them—that is, the boss did. We had important thoughts to think. And they curled up and died.

Trouble with wild flowers is they have no intelligence. They don't know when they're well off.

But, be that as it may, the wild flower, struggling in its sparse soil and fighting everything, seems to get along. Brought into civilization and given all its heart's desire, it passes out.

A philosopher might draw a couple or three morals out of that. But not me. It is too darn hot.

Montaigne.

Every now and then I run across, in a work of fiction, an old gentleman—frequently of the Deep South after the "wah," who was fond of reading and quoting Montaigne's essays.

It impressed me so that, years since, I succeeded in borrowing a copy of the works of Michael Equem de Montaigne, a Frenchman who lived 400 years ago.

Perhaps my immature mind was as unable to grasp his ideas as it is now to understand Einstein or James Joyce, so I laid the volume aside. Maybe I returned it to the owner, but I can hardly imagine anybody doing that.

But recently I ran across a syndicated article by Charles B. Roth—and I trust he won't mind my quoting him—in which he said Montaigne was the father of advertising.

In his day in France a man who wanted to sell something had to search all the region for a buyer. A man who wanted to buy something was at a loss. He had to search for a seller.

Montaigne suggested a register, displayed where everyone could see it, listing goods for sale on one side and the names of folk who wanted something on the other. I don't know whether the idea was put into effect or not.

But that was the idea of advertising—its birth. That "register" is now found in the newspapers. Not so many advertisements from prospective buyers—except "Wanted"—in the classified—but plenty from sellers.

Montaigne complained, too, that buying and selling meant haggling over the price until an agreement could be reached. This was no standard value. The seller wanted all he could get. The buyer wanted to pay as little as possible. The easy sucker (this is not Montaigne's language) was stung enough to make up for the shrewd buyer who got a bargain.

Advertising has stopped haggling. When an article is advertised for 65 cents a child whose mother has sent him to the store with 65 cents can buy it—just as well as an astute bargainer. The price is marked—take it or leave it.

I like the modern system. Because anybody who so desires can stick me when he gets the chance. But with prices in the ads, I am rarely stuck.

Except on cantaloupes. Anybody can be stuck on cantaloupes. I'll bet Secretary Wallace can't pick 'em any better than I can.

Languid Isles.

Nothing, except mosquitoes and radio chats on the magic virtues of a mild laxative, exasperates me more than reading a magazine article about the quiet charm of a two-by-four island set in a sunlit sea.

It sounds grand. But it makes me so envious I would get up and kick the cat if we had a cat.

But, after this literary dream has been perused I start thinking about certain details of living on a lonely isle. I like my daily paper. The radio doesn't take its place. I like a good beefsteak every now and then. I'd want a public library just around the corner. And plenty of ice for various uses.

Most important, however, is the question of finances. Even breadfruit would go better with a little butter and fish demands something to cook with it. We are told how unbelievably little is needed for island comfort. But where would I get that little? Selling fish? There seems a little demand for a daily column on an island.

Maybe I won't buy that island after all. But if somebody decides to endow me with a bit of island property I'll take a tiny slice of Manhattan.

Small wonder that the first thought of young couples is to own the house which shall become the setting for their family life. Yours is being offered for sale in the Want Ads of The Constitution.

Georgia TownWill Be Sold To High Bidder*Pineview Goes on Block Thursday To Satisfy Fi. Fas.

PINEVIEW, Ga., Sept. 2.—(AP)—This little farm community in Wilcox county is scheduled to be sold at auction.

Properties of several score of the residents—the 1930 population was 382—have been advertised for the sale Tuesday to the highest bidder to satisfy levies of fi. fas. for bond and special taxes.

About 20 years ago, the town of Pineview was bonded to build a new school. Principal and interest outstanding now is estimated at around $18,000. L. C. Woodin, editor of Abbeville, the county seat, said:

It was assumed here the bondholders would buy in the properties, levied on under a federal court order following a suit for judgment against the town.

"The whole district of Pineview is the school district," Woodin said, "but only the town in the city limits is subject to the debt and the burden falls heavily on the little town."

He said a settlement had been proposed to the bondholders on behalf of the town, but no agreement had been announced.

REMEMBER THIS . . .—Remember last winter, when the cold winds blew and the snow lay deep on the ground and your boy and girl trudged off to school through it, getting to school with their feet wet and the damp cold soaked into their clothes? And how they came home with the sniffles, complaining about being first too cold, and then too hot, in the classrooms of their portable schools, where heat came from an old-fashioned coal stove?

Father Wants Better School For His Boy

That's Why He's Going To Vote for Bonds Tomorrow.

By HAROLD MARTIN.
The man started talking even before he settled down into the chair.

"I am," he said, "the daddy of a boy in school. I have been following this bond campaign pretty closely, and I've been talking about it whenever I found anybody to listen."

"Now what I wanted to say was this. Every once in a while I run into a fellow who says 'Well, I'm all for the bonds for the hospitals, but the school bond business I don't know so much about. When I was a young'un I walked to school through the mud and these portables they are complaining about now are palaces compared to what I went to school in.'"

"Makes Me Mad." "That's what makes me mad. When I was a kid I went to what they called an 'old field' schoolhouse, too. And I walked to get there, three miles by the road, two miles and a half if I cut through the fields. It was cold as the devil plenty of times and sometimes snow was on the ground. I also got up before day and milked two cows before I left for school, too."

"At the same time, I don't see that it did me any particular good and I don't see that as an argument why my kid shouldn't have as good a school to go to as possibly can be provided for him. "I had a patch in the seat of my britches, too, when I was going to school, but I try to keep my boy wearing good clothes now. I didn't have as much to eat as I could have used, being a growing boy, but I try to keep him well-fed."

Things Have Changed. "I don't see the sense of trying to pass on to my son the hardships I had when I was a kid. It was all right in those days, I guess, for every boy walked to school, and most of us wore patched britches, and a lot of us could have used more to eat than we got. But things have changed. If there are good schools in some sections there ought to be good schools in all."

"And you look at it another way. I was tougher as a boy and able to stand more than my boy. That's no credit to me and no reflection on him. It's the way we were raised. "I lived in a house heated by open fireplaces, and going to school in a place heated by a stove in the corner was no hardship to me. It was as good or better than what I was used to at home. I didn't take cold from exposure, because I was exposed blame near all the time, except when I was in bed."

"Take My Boy." "But you take my boy. He lives in a steam-heated house, with even temperature in every room. He's neither too hot nor too cold when he's at home."

"Then he goes to school and spends six or seven hours a day in one of these blamed portables, heated by a stove in one corner and with no heat at all in the halls and he's bound to catch a cold."

"There's another thing, too. I went to school in a one-room school house. If it had caught fire all I had to do was take two jumps and be out the door and into the woods, or out a window, either. If the school where my boy goes caught fire and he tried to get out he'd have to go down a long hallway clogged up with nearly a thousand others. If he jumped out a window he'd jump into a closed court where he'd be as bad off as if he was inside."

Still for Bonds. "I see where some folks are raising sand about the school bonds, saying it would cost more money in taxes, and so on. Well, there are some pretty good folks heading this bond committee and they have all said we could handle the bonds without any more taxes."

"Even if that's not so, I'd still be for the bonds. I spend a little money around the house trying to make my kids' home as attractive as possible. I don't see why I shouldn't be willing to pay my share to make his school a decent place to go to."

"I'm just saying all this to get it off my chest, because I think that a whole lot of daddies feel the same way I do. These fellows who talk about walking three or four miles to get to the little red schoolhouse I see are driving automobiles today. If the old ways are so hot, they should be using a horse and buggy."

"As for me, I want my kid to be as happy and as comfortable as he can. And I want my town to do what it ought to do in the way of schools and hospitals and all."

"For that reason, when the time comes tomorrow, I'm going to vote the straight ticket for bonds, right on down the line."

Dominican Strong Man, Ill, Is Flown to Miami

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 2.—(AP)—General Rafael Leonidas Molina Trujillo, strong man of the Dominican Republic, arrived here today aboard a chartered clipper, reportedly en route to New York for a physical examination. He has been ill.

Man, 60 Years Old, Is Held in Pennell Death

Suspect Arrested Near Where Body Was Found in Woods.

City detectives yesterday arrested Virgil E. Gossett, a 60-year-old white man of an Ormond street address, on a charge of suspicion—investigation, as police continued to probe the death of Earl Edward Pennell, 54, whose body was found yesterday in a wooded area off University drive, S. W.

Gossett was taken into custody in the woods near where the body was found. Detectives P. B. Green and H. F. Brown reported. He was wearing a pair of shoes which belonged to the dead man, they said.

Meanwhile a coroner's jury yesterday decided Pennell came to his death as the result of a fracture on the left side of the forehead. Whether the wound was accidental or deliberately inflicted was not mentioned in the verdict.

Pennell's wife told police Sunday he had recently suffered two strokes. Credence to a theory that Pennell had been robbed, either before or after death, was lessened when the detectives said $8 in cash, believed to have been stolen, was later discovered in his shirt pocket.

Funeral services for Pennell will be held at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes. The Rev. Paul Giam will officiate and burial will be in the National Cemetery at Marietta.

Social Reformist, Lillian Wald, Dies

WESTPORT, Conn., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Lillian Wald, founder of the famous Henry street settlement in New York City, author and close friend of President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, died last night. She was 73 years old.

Miss Wald, who devoted her life to social reform, had been ill for some time at her home, "House on the Pond," here.

Miss Wald also founded the Visiting Nurses' Association in New York, which today sends more than 250 nurses daily throughout the city, and it was through her efforts that the children's bureau in the federal Department of Labor was established.

Acting Mayor Seized In Effort To Rob Town

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 2.—(UP)—Acting Mayor Carlos Ramos, of suburban Guanabacoa was shot and killed today while attempting to break into the strong box at the township's tax office.

When ordered to surrender by police, who surprised him, Ramos opened fire, wounding Private Antonio Correa.

Police said an accomplice, Daniel Garcia, who was seized without resistance, confessed to similar thefts.

D. F. Houston, Wilson's Aide, Is Dead at 74

Former Cabinet Member Succumbs to Brief Illness.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—(AP)—David Franklin Houston, 74, life insurance company executive, former educator and a member of Woodrow Wilson's cabinet through the World War President's eight years in office, died at the Harkness pavilion today after a brief illness.

He was secretary of agriculture from 1913 to 1920 and in that capacity helped to organize the Federal Reserve Bank system. From February, 1920, until March, 1921, he was secretary of the treasury and also acted as chairman of the Federal Reserve and Farm Loan boards. From 1916 to 1920 he was a member of the council on national defense.

Since the first of the year he had been board chairman of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, assuming this post after 13 years as president. He also was a director of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company—he formerly was an A. T. & T. vice president—the Guaranty Trust Company, U. S. Steel Corporation and the North British & Mercantile Insurance Company.

He was the author of "A Critical Study of Nullification in South Carolina," published in 1902, and of "Eight Years With Wilson's Cabinet."

At the hospital when he died were his two sons, David F. Jr., of Providence, R. I., and Lawrence Reid, of New York, and his daughter, Mrs. Robert C. Patton, of Oyster Bay, N. Y.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at St. John's Episcopal church, Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y.

F. G. Brock, 53, Dies; Rites Today

F. G. Brock, 53, retired street car operator for the Georgia Power Company, died yesterday morning at his residence at 531 Hardin avenue, College Park, after an illness of more than six months.

Surviving are his wife, two sons, J. A. and H. A. Brock; two daughters, Miss Kathleen and Miss Martha Brock; three brothers, A. F., J. B. and E. B. Brock, and three sisters, Mrs. J. W. Newell, Mrs. Nettie Evans and Mrs. W. I. Jackson.

Funeral rites will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of A. C. Hemperley, with the Rev. James L. Baggott and the Rev. W. S. Robison officiating. Burial will be in Moreland, Ga.

DO THE DEAD RETURN?

A strange man in Los Angeles, known as "The Voice of T. o Worlds," tells of astonishing experiences in far-off and mysterious Tibet, often called the land of miracles by the few travelers permitted to visit it. Here he lived among the lamas, mystic priests of the temple. "In your previous lifetime," a very old lama told him, "you lived here in this temple. You and I were boys together. I lived on, but you died in youth, and were reborn in England. I have been expecting your return."

The young Englishman . . . amazed as he looked around the temple where he was believed to have lived and died. It seemed uncannily familiar, he appeared to know every nook and corner of it, yet—at least in this lifetime—he had never been there before. And mysterious was the set of circumstances that had brought him. Could it be a case of reincarnation, that strange belief of the East that souls return to earth again and again, living many lifetimes?

Because of their belief that he had formerly been a lama in this temple, the lamas welcomed the young man with open arms and taught him rare mysteries and long-hidden practices, closely guarded for three thousand years by the sages, which have enabled many to perform amazing feats. He says that the system often leads to almost unbelievable improvement in power of mind, can be used to achieve brilliant business and professional success as well as great happiness. The young man himself later became a noted explorer and geographer, a successful publisher of maps and atlases of the Far East, used throughout the world. "There is in all men a sleeping giant of mind-power," he says. "When awakened, it can make man capable of surprising feats, from the prolonging of youth to success in many other worthy endeavors." The system is said by many to promote improvement in health; others tell of increased bodily strength, courage and poise. "The time has come for this long-hidden system to be disclosed to the Western world," declares the author, and offers to send his amazing 9,000-word treatise—which reveals many startling results—to sincere readers of this paper, free of cost or obligation. For your free copy, address the Institute of Mental Physics, 213 South Hobart Blvd., Dept. 99-M, Los Angeles, Calif. Readers are urged to write promptly, as only a limited number of the free treatises have been printed.—(adv.)

AROUND Atlanta

WITH THE CONSTITUTION STAFF

Meeting of the Tammany Club will be held at 8 o'clock tonight at the clubroom on Whitehall street. Candidates for political office will speak.

Improvement was reported at Grady hospital yesterday in the condition of Willard Beck, 39, of Bradley avenue, who, according to police, lost both legs Sunday when struck by a train in the rear of 480 Marietta street.

George Hodgins, 33, of Marble Hill, Ga., was reported in fair condition yesterday at Grady hospital, where he was admitted Sunday after the car in which he was riding struck a tree on the old Marietta highway. He suffered cuts and bruises, and a fractured right arm.

Lee Roosevelt Auxiliary No. 13, United Spanish War Veterans, will meet at 10:30 o'clock this morning at Storch's.

Civilian Club of West End will hold its semi-monthly meeting at 7 o'clock tonight at Corowanna Lodge.

Regular September meeting of the Oakland City Civic League has been postponed until 8 o'clock next Tuesday night at the I. N. Ragsdale school. Officers will be elected.

Men's Garden Club of Atlanta will hold its monthly meeting at 12:30 tomorrow afternoon at Rich's tearoom. Dr. C. C. Harrold, Macon, authority on Georgia flora, will speak on magnolias, according to Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, president.

Francis Shurling, director of the office of government reports, will speak to the Optimist Club at 12:15 this afternoon at Davison's tearoom.

The Rev. W. W. Shannon, of Miami, will speak on "Christian Patriotism" at the meeting of the Optimist Club at 12 o'clock this afternoon at Davison's tearoom.

JUDGE CONE SHOULD BE RE-ELECTED

(Reprint Journal Editorial)

Judge of the Traffic Court

The current report of the National Safety Council lists Atlanta among the cities leading in reduction of traffic injuries and deaths. Where 86 persons died from such accidents on our streets in 1936, there were only 28 in 1939; and thus far in 1940 the record is still better. It will continue to improve if the efficient and conscientious work which has brought about these happy results is sustained. Otherwise, there will be a relapse to the old carelessness which brings suffering and death.

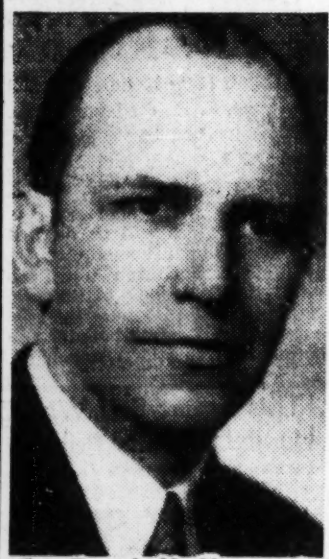

Judge John L. Cone, of the city traffic court, has a key position in that work. His is one of the least popular but most important offices in our local government. Unless he does his duty, however hard and unpleasant it is, traffic laws cannot be enforced; which means that drunken driving, speeding, running over red lights and other dangerous practices will not be controlled. No matter how vigilant the police may be, unless the traffic court judge stands for uniform and impartial justice the entire system of safety defense will become demoralized. So it was in the old days of "ticket fixing," when the politically favored could laugh at the law and when the rank and file looked upon it as a farce. No wonder Atlanta's traffic death rate was then near the highest in the nation.

Every driver who wants safety for himself and for others, every pedestrian who values life and limb, every home that is anxious for its children, has a stake in the traffic court. Judge Cone has dispensed many transgressors, particularly those brought to book for repeated offenses. But the thinking voters of Atlanta will not value him the less because he lacks popularity among those who are defiant or negligent of the law. His re-election in the primary September 4 will do much to insure continued progress in the traffic safety achieved under Mayor Hartsfield's administration.

Keep your court out of the hands of cheap politicians, by re-electing an honest, fearless Judge.

iron guard, whose name was not disclosed, was under "house arrest" and a former minister of culture, M. Chita, was jailed on a charge of delivering an inflammatory speech.

Ion Lugajanu, parliament member and editor, who formerly was minister to Rome, was released today after being held in jail overnight.

Public indignation was indicated, however, by pieces of paper pasted over signs on shops reading "German spoken here" and "Italian spoken here."

Palace Guarded.
A German radio report from Bucharest said Rumania had rejected a Bulgarian demand for removal of the population of southern Dobruja, yielded to Bulgaria within a fortnight in order that the Bulgarian occupation could be carried out simultaneously with Hungary's entry into Transylvania.

Defying government orders against further demonstrations, leaders in Transylvania called a protest meeting for next Sunday at Bashov, where Nazi flags were torn down over the vehement protest of German officials.

King Carol's palace, all public buildings and the Italian and German legations in Bucharest remained under heavy guard as the cry of "death to traitors" and "fight the Hungarians" sounded throughout the Balkan kingdom.

Even the leading pro-German newspaper Curentul called for "revenge" and punishment of those "responsible for giving in like a defeated nation before a shot has been fired."

Logajanu's newspaper, Universal, ignored censorship and published five columns of news about Sunday's wholesale outbursts in which scores of persons were injured, Hungarian property destroyed and windows of German and Italian buildings smashed.

The disorders at Brasov, where the crowds shouted "Down with Hitler! Down with Mussolini!" forced cancellation of German automobile races for which German Minister Wilhelm Fabricius and other Nazi dignitaries were present.

Oath of Vengeance.
Later thousands of persons knelt in the public square and took an oath of "death to the traitors."

In fiery speeches orators demanded to know what happened to the so-called "Carol defense line," now abandoned to Hungary, and "what happened to the billions of lei taken from the peasants to build Rumanian defenses which we are not permitted to use."

Trains leaving Transylvania were packed with peasants and primitive mountaineers.

French Islands In Caribbean Plan Plebiscite

Martinique, Guadeloupe To Vote on Switch to de Gaulle Regime.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Sept. 2.—(P)—The French island possessions of Martinique and Guadeloupe, in the Caribbean sea, intend to hold a plebiscite to determine whether to continue under the Vichy government or switch to the "free" government of General Charles de Gaulle in London, according to reports reaching here tonight.

French equatorial Africa has changed its allegiance to the de Gaulle banner as well as New Caledonia, islands in the south Pacific.

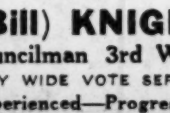

Atlantan Warns Labor Of Patriotic Pretenders
TUCSON, Ariz., Sept. 2.—(P)—James F. Barrett, of Atlanta, Ga., publicity director for the American Federation of Labor, cautioned organized labor today against "attack from those who seek unscrupulously to destroy labor's gains under the guise of patriotism."

In an address at a Labor Day rally, Barrett said it was "unfair" to blame France's downfall on the 40-hour work week, and observed that "there is a great difference between France's 40-hour week and our laws, limiting the working hours of labor. Our legislation permits industry to carry on 24 hours a day and seven days a week if it wishes."

Supporters of Almazan To Organize in Texas
BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 2.—(P)—The Brownsville Herald said today it had learned on "good authority" supporters of General Juan Andreu Almazan would hold an organization meeting within the next few days at San Antonio or Eagle Pass, Texas.

The border paper said formation of the Almazanista group or "Junta" would include a score or more of Almazan followers who fled Mexico after their candidate's claim to the presidency. Almazan now is in the United States on vacation.

36 Arkansas Convicts Flee, Slaying Guard

Two Armed Trustees Lead Break From Pea Patch.

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, Ark., Sept. 2.—(P)—Led by two armed trusty guards, a small band of desperate convicts working in a pea patch killed another guard, disarmed seven others and escaped on horseback and in automobiles from the state penitentiary farm here today.

Officers said at least 36 convicts out of a crew of approximately 150 working in the field, adjacent to heavy woods, disappeared during the shooting that accompanied the break. Two convicts returned to the main camp several hours later and officers said it was possible other short-termers also would return voluntarily.

The ringleaders, believed to number at least eight, made their way on horseback to a near-by town where they held up a Negro motorist and took his car. This automobile was then abandoned later, officers theorizing the convicts had commandeered a second car.

Later, a third car was reported taken from a motorist by five of the convicts who drove south toward Monroe, La.

Authorities at the prison said they had not definitely determined who led the break but the escape was apparently well planned. Among the missing prisoners were four trusty guards, one of them 25-year-old Percy Loftin, of Union county, who was serving a life sentence plus 52 years for murder, robbery and kidnapping. Loftin had a good prison record, authorities said, and was one of four mounted guards, armed with high-powered rifles, in charge of the pea-picking detail.

The slain trusty, who tried to stop the break, was Claude Martin, 41, of Little River county. Prison officials said at least four rifles and six sawed-off shotguns were obtained by the escaping prisoners.

CottonSlashing Peak Reached, Wallace Says

'We Begin Starvation If We Cut Much Further,' He Declares.

CHICAGO, Sept. 2.—(P)—Henry A. Wallace, who resigned as secretary of agriculture to become the Democratic vice presidential nominee, said today he thought the south had almost reached the minimum for its cotton acreage.

"I think the south's cotton acreage had to be reduced," he said in an address prepared for a "non-political" appearance at the American Negro Exposition. "But we can't cut much further. If we do, we stop dieting and begin starvation."

"Already too many people are trying to make a living on southern farms and the situation has been made worse by the increasing trend toward mechanization. "On one side, the market for cotton is contracting. On the other, fewer men are needed to raise the cotton crop. Cotton farmers are caught in a vise. "The situation is serious, but I don't believe at all that it is hopeless. With an ordinary amount of common sense, we can solve the cotton problem and other problems too. Our problem is simple by comparison with the problems of some other countries that lack natural resources. We have almost everything we need. Our problem is to make use of what we have."

Gatti-Casazza Opera Leader, Dies in Italy

Metropolitan Impresario for 26 Years Succumbs at Birthplace.

FERRARA, Italy, Sept. 2.—(P) Giulio Gatti-Casazza, for 26 years artistic director and fiery impresario of the Metropolitan Opera in New York, died here today in his birthplace.

Gatti-Casazza, who was manager of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York longer than any other man of his time, was known as "The Sphinx."

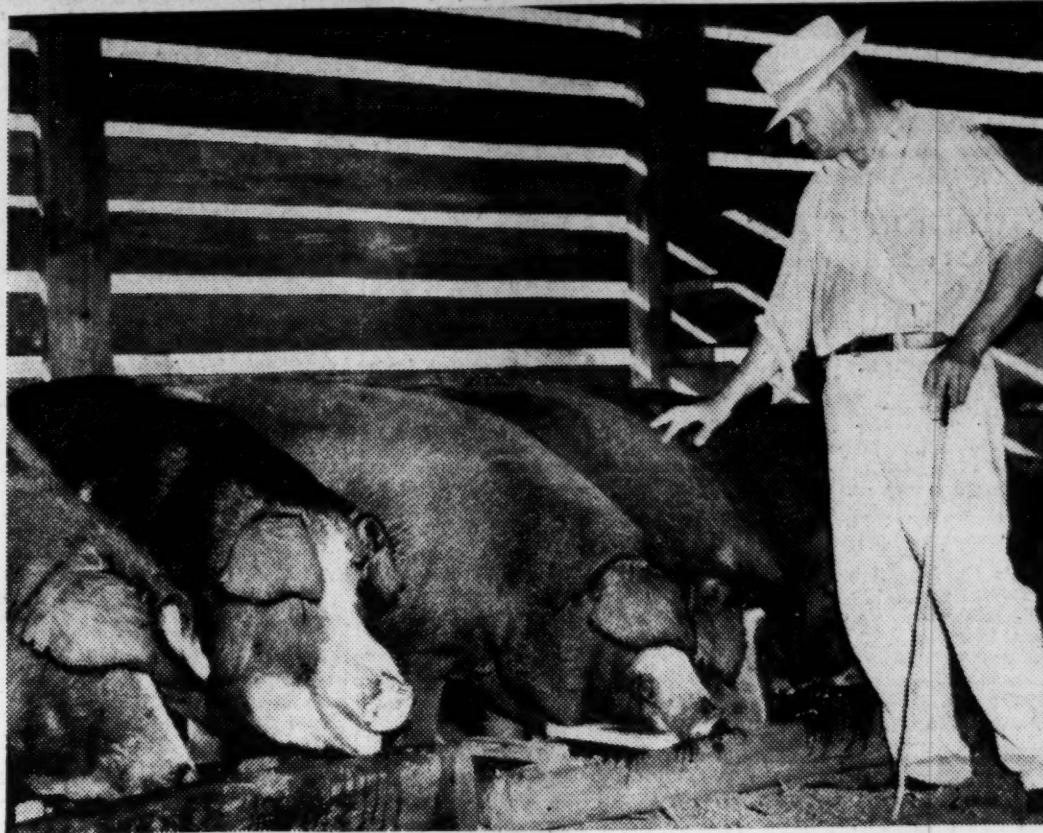

The taciturn silence and unbending dignity which he maintained while handling both stars and finances earned the title for the Italian impresario.

As director of La Scala in Milan, Gatti-Casazza first attracted the attention of the European musical world by popularizing German and French operas on a stage where little but Italian opera had been heard before. In addition to this, La Scala, which had previously been closed because of a financial deficit, became prosperous under his direction.

When he became impresario of the Metropolitan Opera House, Gatti-Casazza was again credited with having brought a theater's books "out of the red." He in-

Pepper Urges Labor, Capital To Co-operate

American Workers Show Patriotism in Defense Program, He Says.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 2. (P)—United States Senator Claude Pepper, champion of American aid for the British, commended organized labor today as the "backbone of the United States" and denounced Adolf Hitler as the "most sinister evil in the world."

Speaking at Jacksonville Beach under the auspices of the Central Labor Union, Pepper said there had not been a single strike in a defense industry since the program was started "because of the high patriotism of American labor in the time of national crisis."

Labor has never been more willing and more patriotic than it is today, Pepper declared. He was applauded when he asserted that "labor of the United States need not be conscripted."

He expressed regret that others had not been as co-operative as labor. "Hitler destroyed organized labor in Germany," Senator Pepper asserted. "Men there today are chained to their jobs. They are nothing less than galley slaves."

"If our rights are worth protecting, if our homes, our seas, our beaches are to be protected, it behooves us, both labor and capital, to become united behind national preparedness to preserve the United States."

The Army IN GEORGIA

FORT BENNING, Ga., Sept. 2. Students in the Company Clerk's School for Special Units of the Fourth Division, located in the Harmony church area at Fort Benning, are progressing rapidly and developing into valuable key men for their respective organizations, according to Technical Sergeant Frank Yardley, chief clerk of the General Staff Section, Fourth Division.

When the division was organized last June, several new organizations were activated in the special units. They found themselves extremely short of clerical personnel, particularly company clerks, and the older units had already been stripped of this type of specialists, furnishing cadres to other new organizations.

General Walter E. Prosser, division commander, took immediate steps to prevent a recurrence of this predicament by directing Major Robert O. Shoe, the Headquarters commandant, to organize and supervise a school of company administration, thoroughly to train young men particularly talented for this important work.

Technical Sergeant Frank Yardley, a non-commissioned officer of outstanding ability and several years' clerical experience, was selected as instructor. The students were largely selected from high school graduates who enlisted during the current expansion of the Army.

The school opened August 5 with 20 students. The course is approximately six months, ending November 1, classes being held four afternoons each week. Other such schools will be conducted as the necessity arises.

SINGLETON PUBLISHES FORMAL FAREWELL.

FORT BENNING, Ga., Sept. 2. General Singleton's formal farewell to his command, published Saturday in the post's Daily Bulletin, was as follows:

"To members of the garrison: 'Upon termination of my command at Fort Benning today because of retirement from the Army, I desire to express my gratitude to the members of the garrison, both military and civilian, for the many evidences they have given of willing co-operation and unselfish service. Regret at leaving is lightened by the memory of many pleasant and profitable associations which I shall carry with me.

"To all of you I extend affectionate greetings and sincere best wishes."

3 Gubernatorial Aspirants Speak Before Holiday Crowds.

By The Associated Press.
The three gubernatorial aspirants pressed their causes today before legions of Georgia's holidaying labor.

Organized labor is not publicly pledged to any of the three candidates, Abit Nix, Columbus Roberts and Eugene Talmadge.

In some of the contests for state-house posts, the big four railway unions recommended specific candidates, but these unions wrote "neutral" beside the gubernatorial bracket on the primary ticket.

Attacks Talmadge.

In a Labor Day address at Canton, Nix directed an attack at Talmadge, particularly the latter's record on state finances while Governor four years ago.

"People are tired of Talmadgeism and the claims of its leader that he is a financial wizard," Nix asserted. "The fact is, Talmadge didn't leave a dime in the state treasury that was not already due to be paid over to the department or agency of government for whose purposes the money was collected and that was not covered by debts. He left the Highway Department with a $3,000,000 deficit."

Ah Rome, Talmadge declared himself a laboring man who "knows what it is to work and toil." He said his wife held a union card in the Order of Railway Telegraphers, an AFL affiliate, "and is proud of it."

Against Sales Tax.
"And remember this," he continued. "One of the best things Talmadge ever did for the laboring man was to prevent the sales tax from becoming law in Georgia. If Talmadge is your Governor, he will keep this sales tax off the backs of laboring men in Georgia."

Speaking in behalf of Roberts' candidacy, Allen J. Smith, of Macon, railway engineer and member of the legislative committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, scored Talmadge's attitude toward labor.

He said Talmadge's attitude was in direct contrast with that of Roberts, whom he termed "always fair to labor in his own employ during a business career of more than 40 years."

"WHAT!—NO NEEDLES?"—It Plays on a Beam of Light

The charming Starr Twins, Charlotte (right) and Virginia (left) are preparing to give their professors something to explain, as they examine the new 1941 Philco Radio-Phonograph. The two young ladies attend Wesleyan College, and are on Rich's College Board.

New Tilt-Front Cabinets

No lid! No need to remove ornaments to reach the phonograph. Formerly vases, flowers, books or bric-a-brac that invariably adorns the top of the console had to be removed, and top lid lifted before records could be played. Now, all the player has to do is to tilt forward the grill and place record on the disk. Women with an eye to beauty and convenience are enthusiastic about this new feature, found only in the new Philco Radio-Phonograph. Its reception, from a sales point of view, has been amazing.

The first basic improvement in record reproduction since the invention of the phonograph! An amazing Philco invention—the Photo-Electric Reproducer—transmits sound on a beam of light... reproduces records through the reflections of a floating jewel on a photo-electric cell. Only Philco has it! No needles to change. In average normal use the floating jewel of the Philco Photo-Electric Phonograph lasts for 30,000 to 40,000 playings, or the equivalent of 8 to 10 years of use!

For the first time you hear the full beauty of every record. Needle talk and surface noise no longer mar its purity. The most glorious record tone you have ever heard.

Records last 10 times longer. No more hoarding your most prized and precious records! You can play them now as much as 700 times without fear of wear. This feature alone will represent an enormous saving to those who have large record libraries.

Authentic 18th Century Period Style Cabinet

And now a new period style cabinet to harmonize with your furniture! Your radio cabinet need no longer look out of place with everything else in the room. Beautifully designed and finished in walnut, this new cabinet lends a decorative touch to your rooms. It is about the height of an ordinary table, so doesn't attract attention as something massive and bigger than your other furniture.

With this cabinet Philco brings to Atlantans something new and something that will add beauty and richness to their homes.

NEW 1941 PHILCO RADIOS GET FOREIGN STATIONS 500% CLEARER

Home Recording—the New "Hit"

Such fun to make a record of Junior's first words... or that speech you intend to make at your next banquet. Make them in your own living room... all you have to do is rig up the mike that comes with Philco's optional record-making attachment. Anybody can do it—just plug in and start talking.

The Philco Home Recording Unit is optional with Philco Photo-Electric Phonographs. It is professional equipment with large microphone and acoustic chamber. Free from record scratch. Make your own records—a new source of pleasure for all the family.

New Cabinets Fit Into Modern Decorative Scene

Keeping pace with the designer of the ingenious device which plays recorded music without the conventional phonograph needle were Philco cabinet designers. In the new models now being shown they present the Tilt-Front cabinet—an idea so practical, so simple, you wonder why you never thought of it yourself. Under the slight pull of a finger the front of the radio cabinet tilts toward you, and there revealed is the automatic record-changing phonograph that plays 10 to 12 records consecutively without attention. Unlike the old-style radio phonograph, the top of the '41 Philco is permanently closed. Books, flowers or other decorative objects usually placed atop the cabinet need never be disturbed. There are no unsightly, awkward lids, doors or compartments. When the phonograph is not in use, it tilts noiselessly back inside the cabinet, hidden from view.

Fifty-one models are included in the newly created Philco line. The widest variety of exquisite cabinets the company has ever manufactured has gained the enthusiastic approval of decorators and furniture stylists throughout America. One interesting model to be shown is the strap-around portable radio, which can be carried from shoulder strap like a camera or pair of field glasses. As Philco goes into its twelfth consecutive year of leadership in the radio industry, they present, through their dealers, a series of models destined to bring a richer, more satisfying type of radio entertainment to millions of American homes.

Philco Brings You Many Other New Features

In radios, too, Philco for 1941 brings you startling new inventions... more tubes for the money, bigger, finer speakers, a complete variety of lovely console and table models... the greatest value in Philco history! With radio part and parcel of every American household, the pleasure of owning a brand-new 1941 model is something to look forward to... and at the low cost they're offered, Philcos will add to the enjoyment of hundreds of Atlanta households during the coming season.

Our Own National Politics Big News

With a presidential election in the offing, a radio is our best, most dramatic means of keeping in close touch with every move—and there is no better medium than a new 1941 Philco.

World events have moved at such a fast pace that only by tuning in on foreign broadcasts can well-informed Atlantans keep abreast of events abroad. The latest model Philco radios are built to receive foreign stations as clearly as local ones. Broadcasts from London, Rome, Berlin come in with such clarity as to seem almost supernatural!

Built-In American And Overseas Aerial System

—gives you far greater sensitivity on short-wave and standard reception. And you need no "installation," no aerial or ground wires on your roof or around your room... just plug in anywhere and play!

The new XXL Converter Tube is the new Philco discovery that reduces radio noise by five to one. This feature alone will cause rejoicing among radio fans. Imagine the pleasure of no noise or "roaring" when you're listening to your favorite program!

Thrilling Radio To Listen to —the new Philco with its full, rich tones. The true tone blending of this radio will make you really appreciate for the first time the full beauty of music, or the clarity of your favorite commentator.

Thousands of Atlantans who prefer to get their news direct from the world sources, the great army of Georgia school children who wish to keep up with history-making events abroad, and many millions of Americans who are vitally interested in foreign news will be much interested in this perfection of short-wave reception in the new 1941 Philcos.

Never since time began have world events so closely touched the daily lives of all people. At home and at work, history hovers over us. And radio keeps us in touch—now more vividly than ever before. As the course of history moves, the capitol of Europe speak, and now with the new Philco you can scoop the headlines.

Record Players Go Back to College

The newest and most popular fad at college is to have your own record player and a collection of good records. It's a sure path to popularity and good times.

A convenient and useful record player. Can be attached to any radio. It is portable and plays all size records.

"Carry My Books—Carry My Radio"

... says pretty Anne Garrett, University of Georgia student—off to school with her new Philco Portable... and wouldn't you like to carry her books and her radio?

This latest college craze had its beginning for the lighter pleasures, like dancing, but in a world topsy-turvy, there is good reason to have a radio at your side today, especially off at school. World events are moving at a lightning pace, and you could hardly expect a college miss to keep informed out of books printed over two years ago. This is one craze the professors will heartily endorse, for the air is full of news of vital importance to every student.

Miss McDermion And Mr. Chapman Announce Plans

Attracting sincere and cordial interest is the announcement made today of the wedding plans of Miss Eleanor McDermion and John F. Chapman, of Andalusia, Ala. The marriage of the popular couple will be solemnized on September 14 at 6 o'clock at Emory Theological chapel. Rev. Nat Long will perform the marriage in the presence of a small group of friends and relatives of the bridal pair. A musical program will be presented by Ed Rogers, vocalist. The pretty bride-to-be will be given in marriage by her father, A. B. McDermion. Mrs. B. W. Humphrey will be her sister's matron of honor. Mrs. C. L. Cowart will be the bridesmaid.

R. B. Chapman will be best man for his brother. Serving as ushers will be C. M. Chapman, a brother of the groom-elect, and J. R. Gladen.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. A. B. McDermion, parents of the bride-elect, will give a small reception at their home on Oakdale road.

Prior to the marriage of Miss McDermion and Mr. Chapman they will be feted at a series of social affairs. On Saturday Mrs. G. W. Thorton and Mrs. B. W. Humphrey will entertain at a luncheon at Davison's for the lovely bride-elect. On Sunday Mrs. A. B. McDermion will be hostess at a trousseau tea at her home on Oakdale road for her daughter.

On September 13 Mrs. Lewis Moody will give a dinner party at her home on Boulevard drive after the wedding rehearsal. Next week Mrs. Lewis Hall will give a swimming party at her country home for the bridal couple, the date of the affair to be announced later. Other affairs to honor the couple will be announced later.

Sally Forth

Gifted Debutantes Receive Honors as Portrait Painters

THE FIELD OF ART has acquired three new prominent figures in the attractive persons of Selma Wright, Mary Virginia McConnell and Julia Block, who are selected for complimentary recognition today by Sally Forth because of their talent as portrait painters.

The gifted belles, who made their formal bows to society as members of last season's Debutante Club, are rapidly becoming connoisseurs of color and line. Each has recently completed one or more portraits worthy of enthusiastic acclaim, and the trio plans to continue its study of the arts this fall.

Selma has just completed a portrait of her sister deb, Jane Osburn, and those who have seen the completed canvas cannot but agree that the belle is unusually gifted.

Selma doubtless inherits her talent from her mother, Mrs. Ward Wright, whose oil paintings of floral arrangements constantly attract the admiration of her many friends.

In the portrait, Jane's brunette beauty is emphasized against a scarlet background, and Sally is informed that one experiences no trouble at all in recognizing the lovely subject.

Mary Virginia and Julia first met in the art class conducted by the gifted Cornelia Cunningham, who later married J. T. Schoolcraft, and moved to Durham, N. H., to live. The girls' mutual love of painting made them close friends, the bonds of friendship having been further strengthened when they became members of the same Debutante Club last fall.

Mary Virginia has just finished an astoundingly good self-portrait. Posing in the delectable pink tulle gown which she wore to the Halloween ball last October, she painted the portrait while sitting before a full-length mirror.

The pretty daughter of the Owen McConnells, Mary Virginia, has painted a number of pleasing pictures, and her name is enthusiastically mentioned whenever portrait painting is discussed among youthful socialites.

Long before such frivolous thoughts as "coming out" entered her mind, she was painting.

Julia has won several prizes on her work, including a silver cup awarded her during her enrollment at Mount Vernon Seminary, in Washington. Later she won a cash prize given by the special painting class at the High Museum.

The talented deb's portrait is one of her brother, Bates Block Jr., who is posed reading a novel. Carrying out the masculine theme, Julia chose for the background of the portrait a large built-in bookshelf filled with varicolored books.

In the placement of her signature the belle proved her originality. Her name is written where the name of the novel should be.

Selma, Mary Virginia and Julia, who studied at the High Museum following their debuts, will again be enrolled at the art school this fall, and who knows but that their portraits may some day win national acclaim?

FREDDY WATSON, of New York City, doesn't have to depend on reflected glory from his sister, Brenda Frazier, rated America's No. 1 glamour girl, to get around. He has a way of his own when it comes to expounding charm, as some of Atlanta's popular belles can tell you, for he is now enjoying a visit here, along with attractive Donald Gillies, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Both are visiting Mary Elizabeth Beers at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Beers, on Brighton road, and were guests of honor in a party given at the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving Club Saturday evening.

Freddy and Don are roommates at M. I. T., and members of St. Anthony, famed social fraternity. It was while Mary Elizabeth was enrolled in Boston's Bradford Junior College last year that the threesome met, with Brenda forming a foursome for the numerous dates they enjoyed together.

During the summer, the Atlanta belle visited Don's family in Cleveland, later going to Banff, where she was the guest of Freddy's family at their lovely summer home in the Canadian resort.

When Freddy decided to come to Atlanta to pay Mary Elizabeth a visit, Don made up his mind that he was not to be outdone and came along, too. They expect to be here several more days and a number of informal affairs are being planned for their entertainment.

A HIGHLIGHT of the past weekend was the bridge-bingo party at which members of the Atlanta Alumnae Club of Kappa Delta sorority and Sigma Phi chapter of the organization on the University of Georgia campus were hostesses at Zahnhaven on Conway road.

The breezy invitations to the affair were penned in white ink on green paper, the color scheme carrying out the sorority colors of green and white. The clever verses read:

"On Saturday morning at half past ten,
A Kappa Delta for you we'll send,

MRS. CLAYTON PEACOCK.

To take you out where the breezes blow,
About ten miles we'll have to go,
To the most intriguing sort of abode,
Called Zahnhaven, on Conway road,
Nestled in the trees overlooking a lake,
And there's a barbecue pit where we'll have some steak.
Oh! How different this party will be,
Well—naturally so—'cause it's given by K D's!

Bridge-bingo was played in the rumpus room preceding luncheon, and each table was piled high with gaily-wrapped packages. The winner of each game was privileged to take her choice of the gifts, which, Sally hears, numbered articles indispensable to college girls.

The picnic table was overlaid with white covers being marked by napkins bearing the initials K. D. lettered in green.

Kappa Deltas present from the University of Georgia chapter were Sarah Carpenter, Georgia rush chairman; Margaret Baker, president of the Georgia chapter; Bobbie Dell Stockton and Elaine Daniels.

Alumnae entertaining were Frances Bone, alumnae rush chairman; Mrs. Burton Williams, Atlanta alumnae president; Mrs. E. K. Higginbottom, Mrs. William S. Dennis Jr., Mrs. George Bland Jr. and Mrs. Clay Bagley. Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Cary Bone, Mrs. Z. T. Anderson and Mrs. W. J. Zahn.

Miss Timmons Will Be Honored

Each day brings announcement of additional parties to honor Miss Aileen Timmons and her fiancé, Sam Nelson, whose marriage will be an important social event of September 21.

On September 11 Mr. and Mrs. James Morton entertained at a formal buffet supper at their home on Bolling road, and on September 12, Miss Caroline McCarty, who will be one of Miss Timmons' bridesmaids, has planned a luncheon for the bride-elect.

Mrs. John Marsh, cousin of the bride-elect, will entertain at a tea on September 17 at the Piedmont Driving Club, to which a large number of friends have been invited.

Miss Norton Weds Hugh Metcalf Jr.

SMYRNA, Ga., Sept. 2.—Of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends is the announcement of the marriage of Miss Volia Norton, of Smyrna, and Hugh A. Metcalf Jr., of Atlanta, which was quietly solemnized August 10, with Dr. I. A. White, of Marietta, officiating.

Mrs. Metcalf is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Norton, of Smyrna. She graduated from Russell High school in East Point and later attended business college in Atlanta.

Mr. Metcalf is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Metcalf, of Atlanta. He received his education in the Atlanta schools and is a graduate of Tech High school. He is now connected with the Western Venetian Blind Company. The couple will reside in Atlanta.

Miss Gay and Fiance Feted at Supper.

Miss Mary Frances Broach was hostess last evening at a buffet supper at her home on Oakdale road complimenting Miss Catherine Gay, of Gay, and John Woodall, of Woodbury, whose marriage will be an interesting social event of this week.

The hostess was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. J. A. Broach; her grandmother, Mrs. S. R. Dull, and her aunt, Mrs. W. G. Crowley, and guests included a group of friends of the hostess and honor guests, and members of the wedding party.

The buffet table in the dining room was overlaid with a lace cloth and centered with a silver bowl filled with pink and white flowers. Completing the table appointments were silver candelabra holding burning pink tapers.

Marriages Revealed.

FORT VALLEY, Ga., Sept. 2.—Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Betty Bowman to Joe Riley Dykes, of Cochran, on August 22.

Mrs. Victor Tomlinson announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Adelaide Tomlinson, to John McIntosh Kell, the marriage having been performed August 24 by Rev. J. Clinton Ward, pastor of the Byron Methodist church.

Miss Aldred Weds Mr. Peacock In Summerville

SUMMERVILLE, Ga., Sept. 2.—The marriage of Miss Gladys Virginia Aldred, of this city, and Clayton Wesley Peacock Jr., of LaFayette and Summerville, was solemnized Tuesday at 5:30 o'clock at the Summerville Methodist church. The pastor, the Rev. C. C. Clift officiated.

Ferns and other greenery, interspersed with graceful arrangements of white gladioli, banked the altar, in front of which were cathedral candelabra holding gleaming tapers. At intervals were placed urns filled with white gladioli and ferns, and the pews were marked with dainty arrangements of the same flowers tied with white.

A musical program was in charge of Mrs. James Jackson, of Summerville. James P. Stiles, of LaFayette, accompanied by Mrs. Jackson, sang.

Ushers were George Paul Shaw, Gordon Lee Sullivan, and T. J. Esby Jr. Groomsmen were Ray Thurman Jr., G. W. Langford, Gardner B. Allen, of Atlanta, and Joe Hall.

Miss Mabel Aldred was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a blue marquisette, posed over taffeta. She wore a hair bouquet and carried a bouquet of pink roses, tied with matching satin ribbon.

The bridesmaids, Misses Elizabeth Newsom, of Union Point; Montine Park, of Eatonton; Dorothy Jones, of Lithonia, and Rachel Boling, of Summerville, were gowned in marquisette, in pastel shades of yellow, orchid, shell pink, and green, fashioned like that of the maid of honor. They also wore hair bouquets and carried bouquets of pink roses.

The bride entered with her brother, Fred Aldred, who bave her in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his father, C. W. Peacock Sr., who was best man.

The bride's blond loveliness was enhanced by her dress of white duchesse satin which featured a fitted bodice with a sweetheart neckline and leg-o-mutton sleeves ending in a point over the hand. The flared skirt ended in a long train. Her full-length veil was caught at the head with a coronet of real lace and orange blossoms. The bride's bouquet was of white roses, showered with lilies of the valley and tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. T. M. Booth, mother of the bride, wore gray embroidered chiffon. Her corsage was of pink rosebuds. Mrs. Peacock Sr., mother of the groom, wore a navy sheer with a corsage of talisman roses.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Hillman Jackson, of Lithonia; Mrs. L. H. Kent, and young son, of Conyers, Ga.; Eddie Rood of Atlanta; Miss Lou Newsome and Miss Martha Darden, of Union Point, Ga.

The bride and groom left for a two-week trip to southern points of interest. On their return they will reside at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cleghorn in Summerville.

Parties Honor Miss Sterrett.

Hollywood's Most Talked About Star Of the Moment Is Barbara Stanwyck

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 2.—Hollywood's fashion of the moment is to say nice things about Barbara Stanwyck. This sort of thing happens in waves. For weeks, sometimes months, everyone is talking about one particular star. Now it's Barbara. Everywhere you go—particularly at Warner's, where she is co-starring with Gary Cooper in "Meet John Doe"—you hear stories of her kindness to this person, her generosity to that, her graciousness, lack of conceit, and levelheadedness. So I decided it was time for me to take another look—and add my quota to the chorus of praise.

First we look at Barbara, the wife. Barbara is the boss in the Stanwyck-Taylor ménage, and don't think Robert Taylor doesn't know it. He likes it. Between them they own three houses—two ranches in the valley, one in Beverly Hills. They live in the latter, a white-washed English Tudor mansion. They have three servants and a car apiece. The ranches are up for sale, because Barbara has decided she is strictly a city girl. Besides, it is expensive to run three houses.

The Taylors lead a very simple life. Both dislike night clubs; both dislike dining out. For lunch the Taylors have peanut-butter sandwiches—and coffee (Barbara can down 24 cups of coffee a day). For dinner, Robert cooks the steaks or hamburgers on the big open fire in the living room.

When Barbara agreed to marry Bob there was a condition attached to her "yes"—that "Buck" Mack must live with them. Not many husbands would agree to the presence of a third person in the early years of marriage, but it was Buck—or no marriage. Buck lives in a separate wing of the house with Dion, Barbara's adopted 10-year-old son. He is a companion for the boy, plays with him and teaches him. Mack also does the shopping for the house and pays the servants.

He is about 50 years old, and his present association with Barbara is convincing proof of her reputation of never forgetting a friend or a kindness. He knew her in her early days as a chorus girl. Mack at that time was in vaudeville and an old hand at show business. He helped and encouraged Barbara through the dark days of her career. When vaudeville collapsed, Mack was hired by Barbara for a lifelong job.

Some movie couples make it a rule to refrain from discussing their careers at home—but not Barbara and Bob. Bob believes, and rightly, that Barbara is a fine actress. He depends on her judgment. She is the advice-giver. His roles are ruthlessly dissected. And now for Barbara the career girl. I don't know many other actresses here who take their job as seriously as Barbara. She is the champion worrier of them all. Here's what Frank Capra, her present boss, says of her: "She's the most considerate of crew and people on the set of any actress I know, or have known. She assumes everybody's responsibilities. You feel that when she is in a picture she is not there because she has to do the chore, but that she is working with you, worrying about delays and other production costs."

Barbara's picture price is $50,000 per—which is coming a long way from Brooklyn, N. Y., where she was born 33 years ago. Her real name is Ruby Stevens. It became Barbara Stanwyck via an ancient English theater program announcing "Jane Stanwyck" in "Barbara Frietchie."

BARBARA STANWYCK.

MY DAY: The County Fair At Rhinebeck

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—From noontime on, the day proved to be a fairly busy one. Our Norwegian guests arrived in time for lunch. My three young nieces from Michigan also arrived and my cousins, Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan Jr., drove down from their farm near Chatham, N. Y., to see us.

Two people were a trifle late, Franklin Jr., with a young man who was anxious to have a talk with us. They drove up from New York City and arrived in time to swallow a little food before we all left for the county fair at Rhinebeck. Seven children and 12 grown-ups were in the party.

Most of the time we watched the horse show. A wonderful horse from Florida did tricks which pleased all the children. One of the little princesses drew the winning number from a hamper on which chances had been sold to raise money for the Red Cross.

Then we drove through the tent to see the grand exhibitions. When we stopped before some other exhibits, a plea was brought back to me from the youngsters, who wanted to stay and enjoy some of the thrills of the county fair amusement area. I gave my permission for my nieces and the Crown Princess, and Countess Osgaard agreed that their children could stay also. The children returned to the big house just in time for their supper, very much thrilled with the merry-go-round and the balloons and the popcorn which, I think, was something the Norwegian children had not indulged in before.

Our Norwegian guests retired to bed wearied by so many out-of-door activities, and the rest of us listened to the candidate for vice president, Mr. Wallace, speaking on the radio from Des Moines, Iowa. I do not know how many there were in his audience, but it sounded like a most appreciative crowd. I think Mr. Wallace must have been happy to have his neighbors greet him so warmly. The day had been so full that I faced a desk that had not been touched when I finally went upstairs at 11:15. I was rather surprised suddenly to look at the clock and find that it was 3 a. m. when I was through working.

I breakfasted this morning at 8:30 and rode with Mr. Harry Hooker. At 11 Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher arrived with some of the members of the jury of award for the children's crusade and a group of foreign and American children, accompanied by the heads of relief organizations who were to receive the checks.

Old Folks Demanded A Bitter Medicine

By Dr. William Brady.

Nothing raises a doctor's stocks with a certain class of patients so much as a fortnight expression of opinion by the doctor that they have nothing serious the matter, just a slight functional disturbance. Then if the doctor cares to endeavor himself still more in the patient's esteem—for a couple of weeks—he need only inquire indugently what the patient has been taking for it, and whatever it may be bid him go ahead and use it.

The class of patients to which I refer are the fairly well-heeled and dangerously numerous retainers or dependents of the plutocracy and those who have by chance come into a competence. Just what it is that gives these patients their smug notion I don't know, but it seems that the possession of a little more jack than one's neighbor purports to have qualifies one to exercise pretty shrewd judgment concerning the significance of symptoms and the choice of the proper remedies or treatment therefor.

Difficult patients to handle, these wisecracks. It requires considerable patience and tact, at the first interview, or overwhelming force of personality if you have it, to get the patient off his high horse and on the ground where you can get on with your examination. Mr. or Mrs. Wisecrack always prefers to remain firmly in the saddle and cross-examine the doctor to find out whether the doctor really knows anything about such cases, whether he can possibly have had any experience in dealing with the complaints of the upper classes.

Painfully, I recall that in my early years in practice a considerable portion of my patients contrived to make me give them a "good tonic" of some kind, no matter what I thought ailed them or what other remedy or treatment I thought indicated. This tonic had to be powerfully bitter and disagreeable to take—indeed these qualities were what made it a good tonic. You see, there was an innate idea that medicine had to be bitter in order to be potent.

I say patients contrived to make me give them such concoctions. Not patients, perhaps, but the custom of the time. Always the small voice of conscience whispered that if I really knew what ailed the patient I'd prescribe a rational remedy and there'd be no need to string him along with a "tonic." Rarely did I summon the courage to state the problem as plainly as that to the patient. Still more rarely did I keep the patient long after such confession of ineptitude. The public was not yet ready for it.

It is a great satisfaction to a doctor in practice to be able to give a patient or client a clean bill of health. This a doctor can do, of course, only after a painstaking examination. Especially gratifying to the doctor is the authority and privilege of reassuring the patient or client who perhaps has been secretly or avowedly worried by fear of some serious disease. Without one or maybe several successive examinations of the client the doctor cannot exercise such authority and privilege.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Father: "You realize, son, that when a person is given an unusual ability through the accident of birth, he has a responsibility to the world to make good use of his powers."

Help the superior child realize it is not the equipment which he has but what he does with it that is important.

Father: "John can't help knowing he's smarter than other children. He gets his lessons easier than they do, and he'll always be a jump ahead of other persons."

Panelled Style

By Lillian Mae.

Lead off smartly for the new season in an attractive new shirt-waist dress with bolero. Pattern 4567 by Lillian Mae will be becoming to even the most difficult of figures, with its well-proportioned, slimming lines. It's made in popular shirtwaist style, and has a front panel that may be cut bias or straight, depending on your preference. The long, unbroken lines give a tall-and-slim illusion. The dress may have short or three-quarter sleeves, and a ribbon bow and buttons. The jaunty bolero makes it into a nice street outfit for now, gives extra under-coat warmth later on. You'll find this a simple style to stitch up, especially with the sewing instructor for guidance.

Pattern 4567 is available in women's sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36, dress, takes 3-5 yards 35-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly Size, Name, Address and Style Number.

Three cheers for the Lillian Mae Fall and Winter Pattern Book—just off the press! It's right in key with the American spirit of freedom and individuality.

Unusual Cuts of Meat Are Transformed Into Tasty and Tempting Variations

By Sally Saver.

In smart restaurants, and other places where good food is found, you will observe that much use is made of unusual cuts of meat and the meat specialties which include tongue, sweetbreads, kidneys, liver and heart. All of these specialties offer opportunity for interesting variation of meals and none is difficult to prepare in the home kitchen.

Tongue, for example, is considered quite a delicacy and is one of the easiest meats to prepare; it requires nothing more than long, slow simmering in water to cover. To the water may be added some herbs, cloves or bay leaf, if desired. When the tongue is tender (after three to four hours of slow cooking), lift it from the water, cool it, then remove the grainy, tough skin covering. Then it may be served cold sliced, in any number of sauces, or salads or with vegetables. Smoked tongue may be soaked in cold water for about an hour before cooking it.

Tongue and spinach go well together, and above a beef tongue is served with spinach nests, made by twisting portions of unchopped, cooked and drained spinach into shape with a fork. Small depressions in the center are filled with buttered carrots. Here are other ways to serve tongue:

Tongue With Raisin Sauce.

Cook tongue in water to cover, keeping below boiling point all through cooking period, remove skin and serve while hot with this sauce:

- 1-4 cup vinegar
- 1-3-4 cups water
- 1-2 cup brown sugar
- 1-2 tablespoon mustard
- 1-2 tablespoon flour
- 1-4 cup seedless raisins
- Salt and pepper

Mix dry ingredients, combine vinegar, raisins and water. Mix and cook gently until mixture is thickened.

Tongue Salad

- 2 1-2 cups cooked tongue, diced
- 1 cup shredded cabbage
- 1-2 cup firm cucumber, diced
- 3 tablespoons French dressing
- 1 tablespoon chow-chow
- Lettuce, mayonnaise

Hard cooked egg, if desired. Combine ingredients and chill thoroughly. Serve on lettuce or water cress, garnished with mayonnaise. Questions about foods, recipes, cooking and serving will be answered by Sally Saver. Write or phone The Constitution or W.A. 6565.

'Flowers for the Living' Motif Of Pioneer Women's Society

"Flowers for the Living" will be the theme of the program at the monthly meeting of the Pioneer Women's Society to be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Rich's, with Mrs. W. M. Rapp, president, presiding.

Dr. L. C. Fischer, whose showplace, "Flowerland," has been a joy and inspiration to flower-minded citizens of this community for a number of years, will be speaker. Dr. Fischer was one of the first Atlantans to cultivate acres and acres of gorgeous flowers in his gardens which he opens to the public during the blossoming season.

Miss Betty Styron, a talented young vocalist, will present appropriate musical selections accompanied on the piano by her mother, Mrs. Arthur Styron.

As this is the first meeting since the vacation season, Mrs. Rapp urges a full attendance. Mrs. John MacDougald and Mrs. T. J. Ripley, the committee on hospitality, will be at the door to welcome members and their friends and visitors who desire to hear Dr. Fischer.

Mrs. Pelot Named Council Officer

Mrs. L. W. Pelot was elected treasurer of Fulton County Parent-Teacher Council at the meeting of the executive board held Wednesday. Mrs. Pelot replaces Mrs. Elmo Moore, who resigned.

The plans for the year will feature a monthly program relating to the theme adopted by the state, "Education for School Education," with names of speakers and titles of panel discussions to be published later. The next meeting of the council will be the annual school of instruction to be held at St. Peter's September 11.

Lamar Chapter, U. D. C.

Lamar Chapter, U. D. C., will meet today at 2:30 o'clock in Rich's conference room.

The chapter recently unveiled a marker to the memory of General James M. Nash in West View cemetery. Rev. Harold Shields, Mrs. Grady Andrews and Mrs. E. B. Williams officiated. A committee from the chapter assisted at the recent barbecue for the Confederate veterans at the Soldiers' Home with Mrs. E. B. Williams as chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bergstrom are shown above after their marriage Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Webster Van Hoy, on Wilson road. The couple left by plane immediately after the ceremonies for a wedding trip to the west coast. Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Bergstrom was Miss Sarah Henrietta Van Hoy.

Green, Lewis Oakland City Oppose Draft Beats Whittier In Labor Talks For City Title

Both Union Leaders Ed Tanner Fans 11 as Oaks Hammer Out 8-3 Victory.

By The Associated Press.

The nation's workers, observing Labor Day under conditions unmatched since the early years of the World War, heard CIO and AFL leaders join yesterday in vigorous opposition to peace-time conscription.

AFL's William Green and CIO's John L. Lewis, rivals in the organization field, spoke alike against pending proposals to conscript men in peace-time for military training.

Both pledged anew also that labor would work loyally for national defense.

Other Labor Day orators called for the preservation of labor's "social and legislative gains" in industry's shift to arms-making, and a greater voice in the national defense councils.

Both Green and Lewis advocated establishment of conditions which they said would make it easier to enlarge the armed forces by voluntary enlistments. They proposed shorter terms of enlistment and higher pay than those now in effect.

Addressing a labor gathering in Denver, Green said that voluntary enlistment "must be given a fair trial first." He called on President Roosevelt to make known the nation's manpower needs.

"Duty of President," Green said, "On a matter as vital as this to the nation's welfare," Green said, "we feel that it is the duty of the President of the United States to send a message to congress stating the manpower needs of the nation's military forces and recommending a definite program to fulfill these needs."

Lewis, in a radio speech from Washington, said peace-time conscription "would break down our civil liberties" and establish "the principle of compulsion by government."

Like Green, he called for an explanation of the prospective use of conscripted manpower, saying: "There is further something sinister about the attempt to force conscription upon our nation, with no revelation of the purposes for which conscription is sought."

Questions Policy.

"What kind of a foreign policy, what kind of a military and naval policy demands an army of 4,000,000?"

While Green was denouncing European dictatorships and Fifth Column activities, Lewis was charging that "men in high places in the nation" were circulating a "vicious falsehood" that American labor would delay the defense program.

Lewis demanded that circulation of the falsehood be stopped. At the same time he accused American financial powers and arms manufacturers of "beginning to follow the same course" as their French and British counterparts, who, he charged, impeded their defense programs to protect profits.

Green renewed his espousal of all aid short of war to Great Britain.

Labor at the Job.

George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the AFL, in a speech prepared for the Syracuse (N. Y.) Federation of Labor, declared that labor had rolled up its sleeves and pitched into the job that has to be done to translate the defense program from blueprints to tangible instruments of defense.

At a convention in Chicago of CIO's United Office and Professional Workers' Union, A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said labor should be on guard "against those who are attempting to twist the virtues of national defense into a plan for destroying the gains which labor has made."

At Mt. Carmel, Ill., Senator Minton Democrat, Indiana, told a Labor Day meeting that the "Wagner act is here to stay."

But some of the criticism aimed at the labor's board administration of the act was justified, he said.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

The rags to riches saga of Shorty Peacock's Oakland City baseball nine came to its happy ending yesterday when the stepchildren of the Atlanta Amateur Baseball Federation's second annual tournament climaxed a week of brilliant play by trouncing the Whittier Mills, 8 to 3, in the tournament finals to capture the city crown.

The club which finished in second place in their league, had taken up nickels and dimes all year in Oakland City to buy equipment, had scraped up a bunch of misfit uniforms and had borrowed bats so they could enter the tournament, had all Atlanta pulling for them as in the waning days of the meet everyone suddenly realized the plucky "Raggy Ann" nine really had a chance to cop the meet.

With Ed Tanner curving the Whittier boys dizzy, allowing just seven hits and striking out 11, Peacock and Company played beautiful ball as field and sounded off with eight ringing base hits which they made good for as many runs much to the delight of a crowd that filled the park and spilled over onto the banks out at Fulton Bag.

Three resounding triples, two from the bat of Buster Brown and one of T. B. Peacock's mace, came with two men on bases and accounted for six of the Oakland runs. It was really these timely extra-base clouts which won the game. T. D. Peacock led the hitting with two singles and his triple. His other time at the plate he lined sharply to the left field.

The Oakland City nine will leave for Birmingham to represent Atlanta and Georgia in the National Federation's world meet next Friday. Play there is to begin Saturday.

Sharp SHOOTIN'

PICKING UP A FEW LOOSE ENDS.

Golf tournaments being what they are and lasting well into the night as far as getting all the data is concerned, it is usually better to trail along a day behind festivities with any remarks not necessary to telling the story of the day's play. In that way, of course, you get ahead far enough to have a chance to follow the matches coming up.

When I started that paragraph, I had no idea it would get so involved. In other words, I am writing this on Sunday night, so I'll be able to take to the course, instead of the typewriter, come Monday and the finals.

The subject is driving. For example, the drives of Charlie Brumby and Gene Dahlbender Jr., during their match Sunday afternoon. It was not a driving contest, of course, and golf does not pay off on drives. Still, there were a lot of spectators around wishing they could hit just one shot from the tee as Brumby and Dahlbender did.

One drive in particular brought "ohs" and "ahs" from every corner of the natural "amphitheater" on which fans had gathered to watch the 13th hole. Brumby sent his wood onto the green four feet from the cup.

Now that is a par 4 hole and it is listed on the card at 285 yards. The green is a bit higher than the hole, both elevated above the fairway. I doubt if the hole was playing at 285 yards Sunday. It might have been 270 or even a little less. That makes little difference as far as Charlie's shot was concerned—a few yards couldn't on a shot like that.

It was simply a perfect shot at long range. If it had been 250 or even 225, it still would have been a great shot. When you get past 225 yards and stick a ball that close, you have done something. At 270 yards, the odds soar out of sight.

Those who saw that ball from vantage points back of the 13th green will tell you the ball came in looking for the cup.

It actually looked that way from where we were standing. Looking for the cup after a ride of some 270 yards by air line. When you remember that Brumby came back with that shot for a conceded eagle after seeing Dahlbender chip in an eagle to take a 1-up lead at the 12th, you can add pressure in any quantity you deem necessary.

Some might have played safe after Dahlbender hit his ball to the left of the green in the deep rough. In fact, that might have been the shot. But not the way it turned out.

That tee shot might have been the turning point. I don't think it was. Yet a shot like that whether it actually wins the hole or not is disconcerting. Dahlbender couldn't handle the tall rough where his ball stopped, and he might have lost to a 3 or a 4. But the shot so close to the pin may have started the spelling of defeat.

The turning point as far as I was concerned came at No. 15, where Brumby chipped up and sank an 18-foot putt to save his lead which he gained at the 14th.

Anyway, don't forget the long wood shot that had eyes and the long iron to the 18th. Brumby really clinched that match with a fine shot, you know—eight feet from the cup from about 220 yards.

Surely yards I could hunt one, say, 240 yards or so. If Brumby or Dahlbender hit a tee shot that short, he probably would toss the club aside and run it out.

National Semi-Pro Champs To Play Puerto Rico September 21.

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 1.—(AP)—Enid, Okla., won the National Semi-Pro Baseball championship tonight, defeating Mt. Pleasant, Texas, 5 to 1.

The victory was worth $5,000 for Enid, winners of the 1937 title. It was the second consecutive year for Mount Pleasant to finish in runner-up position.

The Enid veterans just had too much power, seven of their hits going for doubles.

Vance Cauble, veteran Enid southpaw, held Mt. Pleasant to five hits for his fourth victory in the tournament. He fanned nine.

Every 'Gator Post Open, Says Lieb

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Sept. 2.—(AP)—Florida's 'Gators began a twice-daily practice program here today as they started preparing for their schedule opener against Mississippi State, September 23.

"Every position is wide open," Tom Lieb, new 'Gator mentor as successor to Josh Cody, said as the two-score players invited here for the training sessions set to work.

"I haven't seen any of the boys play so they will all start out as candidates, earning their positions by what they show on the field," Lieb explained. "Because a boy was a regular last year, it doesn't necessarily mean that he is going to be a regular this year."

Lieb will continue the two-a-day practices until classes begin at the University, September 16. The 'Gators have only 23 days in which to get ready for their first encounter.

RICH'S

Nashville Clinches Pennant as Crackers Divide Double-Header

BY JACK TROY

Wave Rolls NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 2.—The thundering herd limbered up and then separated into eleven. Modern football is highly systematized.

A coach of a squad like Tulane picks out his first and second eleven in the spring. They start in the "fall" as a unit. The scrimmages later on may bring revisions, but the fact is that a football squad like Tulane, which is no different from any of the large schools of the country, goes right into signal practice on the first practice day. Allowing 10 days for conditioning, the squad could easily start its schedule.

The Tulane squad was hot-looking in more ways than one as it went through the morning drill. The sun is pushing the thermometer around 100 degrees. One perspires copiously standing around in the shade.

The Tulane huskies dropped excess poundage as you watched. They promise to be one of the country's foremost squads when they're whipped into top shape.

There couldn't be a better-looking squad in the south. You just don't find more impressive football individuals than Co-Captain Tom O'Boyle, Bob Glass, Walter McDonald, Fred Brekke, Claude Groves, Pete Mandich, Charlie DuFour, Fred Cassibry, Fred Gloden, Pete Golomb, Frenchy DeFrait, and so on.

You watch them race through signal drill for 30 minutes and thank your lucky stars you don't have to line up against them.

You can almost feel the Tulane power. All around the talent is three deep for every position. And off in another corner of the practice field is one of the finest squads of freshmen players you could wish to see. Sterling frosh. Onlookers were astonished by the numbers, if not the size, of the Tulane freshmen. Someone counted up to 27 and said that was more than the usual number.

"You have only counted part of them," another onlooker interrupted. "That's the line. The backs are over there."

Tulane actually has around 50 frosh candidates, and it is a certainty that a few stars will come out of the group. The Wave has risen to power and apparently intends to stick around in the top bracket for some time to come.

No Problems There are supposed to be two problems connected with the gargantuan Greenies. They are supposed to be lacking in tackle and guard reserves, and there is said to be a lack of experience at quarterback.

Mr. Pic DuFour probably has the answer to one of the problems.

Pic Writes: "The ability of a quarterback to block often can make a play, tactically unsound, succeed. So don't shed too many tears over the quarterback problem. It may not be a problem at all."

Tulane has four big, fast quarterbacks. And for replacements for the starting tackles, there are TWO 250-pounders—Roman Bentz and Ernie Blanding. They can move around, too.

Really, the heat is the only problem. And right now it is helpful in reducing the candidates.

Come Around Long time ago Earl Mann said, perhaps in jest, that the Atlanta club might consider selling Les Burge for $1,000 a home run. Up until three weeks ago that appeared to be the most insane statement of the year.

Burge suffered a broken thumb in an awkward slide early in the season. And neither afield nor at the plate had he looked the part of a ball player.

Manager Paul Richards insisted he had put Burge back into the lineup too soon, but there was no inclination to give Burge the benefit of the doubt. That goes for the fans as well as the writer.

I suppose Burge was accorded the most disheartening reception a ball player could get when he was going so badly it finally became necessary to remove him from the lineup.

I recall there was much criticism when Richards took Hafey off first and sent Burge back into the lineup. The criticism included not only the spoken word but the written, as well.

Richards took the criticism in stride. Burge was hurt but didn't show it.

Now it is well established that Richards knew what he was doing. He figured Burge was due to do some hitting. As soon as he started hitting a little, Lester's confidence returned and today he is the Burge of old.

Mann today could sell him for $1,000 a home run and not come out badly in the bargain.

Exception Nashville is an exception to the rule that it takes pitching to win pennants. If the Vols had depended on their pitching this season they'd be battling Knoxville for the cellar, chances are.

How about the starting pitcher lasting only 55 times in over 140 ball games? Vol pitchers have worn a path from mound to bench in every park.

The pitching has not been worthy of the name. Instead, hitting and defense have turned the trick.

The Vols have established a new double play record for the Southern League. The defense has been exceptional.

There has been a quality to the hitting that is exceptional, too. For instance, four batters—Bob Boken, Greek George, Gus Dugas and Art Moser—have batted in more than 100 runs apiece. Socco Rocco has a chance to reach 100 in the final week of the season.

And, strange as it seems, Oris Hockett, who is hammering along toward 90, would have been a breeze for 100 or more except that he was out three weeks because of an injury.

Can you imagine a ball club where four batters have driven in more than 100 runs and two others are mighty close?

If you can't imagine such a club, think of Nashville.

The Vols haven't had to have pitching. They have had superb defense and hitting.

And, while they have had hand-box Sulphur Dell, too, they really haven't needed it.

Nashville's first pennant winner in 24 years is a most deserving outfit.

HERE COMES THAT SINKWICH MAN!—The man with the ball is Frank Sinkwich, a phenomenal runner with the Georgia Freshmen last season and counted on heavily by supporters of the Bulldogs in the coming campaign. This picture was made yesterday as Wallace Butts put his gridders through their opening paces at

54 Bulldogs Open Grid Drills; Todd's Bad Shoulder Big Worry

Sophomore Passer's Tossing Arm Visibly Affected; If Jim Can't Play, Sinkwich Must Be Burdened With Extra Duties.

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 2.—Poundage melted off like sugar in hot water here this afternoon as 54 husky athletes answered Coach Wallace Butts' call for football practice at Georgia.

Two of the hardest opening day workouts ever held started a new grid season off in grand style with coaches and players sweating their way through fundamental drills in mid-season form.

Keen spirit among the red-shirted warriors kept up the pepper although many of the sweat-laden lads found it pretty hard to keep going towards the last part of the afternoon session.

Most of the day's talk among fans concerned the shoulder of lanky Jim Todd, sophomore passer who hurt his shoulder in spring practice. His passing is visibly affected and Bulldog coaches were pessimistic on his chances of coming around.

BEST PASSER. Should Todd be unable to throw effectively it will be a hard blow to the tailback post as he was considered the best passer on the squad. It will leave the chunking duties up to Frankie Sinkwich.

The morning practice was devoted to passing and signal drills while in the afternoon the boys got in some contact work on blocking.

Incidentally, Nowell drew words of praise from coaches for his blocking.

A few of the players have a bit of excess weight but on the whole the squad is in excellent condition for the first day. Sinkwich is one of those a little overweight. He tips the scales at about 195 while his playing weight runs about 180 or 178. Tommy Green, husky tackle, also has a few extra pounds he will have to get rid of.

TAKE TIME OUT. Kimsey, Keuper and Green were most effected by the heat this afternoon and had to call time out. Players lost anywhere from three to ten pounds during the two drills.

The University of Georgia Athletic Association was host at a chicken barbecue on the river near here tonight and a great time was had by all—especially the newspapermen present. Ears Whitworth retained his champion ship title after a close race with Spec Towns and an unidentified newspaperman who looked as if he hadn't seen food in weeks.

Two-day workouts will be continued by Butts until school starts.

100-Mile Race Won by Flock Before 11,000

Fontelleo Flock, of Atlanta, driving car No. 13 and starting the race with 13 gallons of gas in his car, yesterday won the annual 100-mile Labor Day stock car race at Lakewood before a roaring holiday crowd of 11,000.

Flock won first place despite the fact his car once turned over. Spectators helped pull it back upright. His time for the 100 miles was 1 hour, 33 minutes and 45.3 seconds.

Gene Comstock, Chesapeake, Ohio, finished in No. 2 position, three seconds back of the winner. Comstock changed a wheel during the race in the amazing time of 27 seconds.

Bub Seither, Dayton, Ohio, was third.

Red Singleton, Atlanta veteran, burned up the track and held the lead for 81 laps. Red was forced into the pit on the 78th lap to change a tire, then returned to hold his lead until the 81st when he again had to remove his car from the track. Singleton finished fourth.

Nelson Defeats Snead One Up For PGA Title

One Down, '39 Open Champ Captures 34th and 35th Holes.

HERSHEY, Pa., Sept. 2.—(P)—Byron Nelson defeated Sam Snead, 1 up, on the 36th green today in the final match for the Professional Golf Association championship.

One down going to the 34th hole, the 1939 Open champion won two straight holes with birdies and then finished off the match with a par on the final green.

He finished with a 34 on the last nine, three under par, with a gallery of at least 1,500 racing around him down the fairways.

Snead's putt for a half on the 34th hit the cup and bounced out, else they would have gone extra holes. Again he missed a seven-footer for a half on the 35th, where Nelson knocked down from six feet what proved to be the winning putt of the match.

Facing unexpected defeat after having led all the way from the sixth hole in the morning round, Nelson made a thoroughbred finish to win. Snead went 1 up for the first time in the match by holing a birdie 2 on the 32nd green. They halved the 33rd, and then Nelson began his rally.

He put his approaches six feet from the cups in win both the 34th and 35th with birdies and take back the lead. On the 36th his tee shot again rolled not more than six feet past the pin, while Snead's was 30 feet short. Snead putted but fell short. Nelson's putt for his third straight birdie slid past the hole, but Snead shook his hand and it was over.

Besse Allows Pels Five Hits In First Clash

Misjudged Fly and Dark-ness Beat Luman Harris in Nightcap.

By JACK TROY.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2.—The Crackers fumbled their last chance to overhaul the Vols here today when they split a double-header with the Pels.

The loss in the second game dropped the Crackers 8½ games behind Nashville, which won two games. With only six contests remaining for each club, there is no way of figuring it, except to give Paul Richards' club second place.

At the same time the Pels skipped over the Lookouts into the first division. Although the Crackers didn't win the flag, they at least have the distinction of being the first second-place club to capture 90 victories since Atlanta did it in 1925.

Berman Besse pitched a five-hitter to beat the Pels, 7-to-3.

LUCKY FOR LOVE

Marilyn Accepts Brue's Dinner Invitation. They Stop By Gordon's To See Al

By JANE DIXON.

SYNOPSIS. Clara Marsh, very conscious of her blond good looks, is announced as the winner of a six-county beauty contest in Milwaukie, Wis. She is 16 years old, New York City, and is a representative of the Metropolitan Amusement Corporation of New York and Clara takes the $100 prize for a chapter for herself instead of taking her mother. That evening Clara's younger sister, Marilyn, is awarded the $1,000 prize for the next line in Clara's Soap Soap Flakes contest. Marilyn celebrated by going to the Blue Parrot with Sally Meacham with whom she works in the Blue Parrot. Back in New York with Clara, Al tells Palmer Watson, Metro-polis chief, Clara is drinking too much and getting out of hand. Al writes Marilyn, who has just been offered a position in Clara's New York office, that Clara refuses to return home and while he is on his way to the Blue Parrot night club, trying to locate her, she is drinking champagne there with Herman Hest. Al tells her the proprietor would put her in his floor show, but Marilyn in New York. She phones Clara but is refused. Clara is accusing her of spying on her. Al's ruse brings them together but Clara still is obdurate. Marilyn goes to work in Clara's promotion department. Al hears Clara will be at the Blue Parrot two nights later and takes Marilyn there. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XVIII. At three o'clock an office boy came to her desk with a memo. She held it in her lap to steady her hands as she read:

"Please come to my office. The boy who delivers this note will show you the way." Bruce Gordon.

Marilyn folded the note and tucked it into the pocket of her blouse. This was the end, of course. Miss Cook had told Bruce Gordon—how utterly she was failing. Miss Cook had told how dull, how stupid she was, how empty. He would understand after last night, after the scene in the Blue Parrot, and Clara.

"Gee, Marilyn, what's happened?" Kathleen Garvan leaned over from her desk to inquire. "You look like a ghost. Can I get you a glass of water?" Marilyn said, so low that Kathleen had to strain to catch the words. "Thanks. I'm all right. I'm fine. I guess it was the memo—it sort of surprised me. It's from Mr. Gordon, Bruce Gordon. I'm to see him in his office."

"From the boss? Personal from B. G. himself?" Kathleen's eyes were so wide they resembled twin blue pools. "Gee, that really is something!" Marilyn followed the boy, conscious only of the heaviness of her feet and the dryness of her lips. He led her through a series of two outer offices, where typewriters clicked busily, and mentioned her through a door. Across one corner of a room flooded with sunlight was a great mahogany desk. It was the largest, the handsomest desk Marilyn had ever seen, the deep red-brown of its surface burnished to shining satin, the carved figures across its front standing out in bold relief like living things marching. Behind the desk, the height of him commanding its expanse, sat Bruce Gordon.

"Come in, Miss Marsh," he called cordially, and turned to a slim dark girl who obviously was taking dictation. "That will be all for the present, Miss Thompson." The girl left immediately, closing the door after her. "Sit down, won't you?" Bruce Gordon rose and drew a chair closer to his own. "You admire the desk, don't you? It was father's. Rather a beauty. Not easy to live up to always, nor to him—father. You're wondering why I sent for you. There's a little matter—"

"I know, Mr. Gordon," Marilyn said, surprised by her own calm, now that she faced the inevitable. "I'm sorry."

"You know?" It was the man, now, who showed surprise. "I'd have sworn—but I'm afraid I'm the one to be sorry. I owe your sister an apology, Miss Marsh."

"You owe my sister—you owe Clara an apology? What for? Why should you apologize to Clara—after last night—"

"For being pretty abrupt when she telephoned me a half hour ago and asked me to dine with her in her hotel apartment this evening. She said that you, too, are to be a guest. Somehow the invitation didn't quite ring true. I pleaded another engagement."

Marilyn flushed so painfully that Bruce Gordon turned his head to gaze out the window. Suddenly he wanted to take her in his arms, to hide her face on his shoulders.

"The invitation was not true, so far as I am concerned in it."

Mr. Gordon. Marilyn said. "I know nothing about dinner with Clara. This is the first I've heard of it—from you."

Those flecks of fire came into Bruce Gordon's eyes again. "I suspected as much," he said. "So I declined. Said I had an engagement. Perhaps it was wishful thinking. Perhaps—would you dine with me this evening, Miss Marsh?"

The question was so unexpected, so eager, so ringing with sincerity it brought Marilyn to her feet. Impulsively she held out her hand.

"Why yes, of course," she said, tingling with a new joy. "I'd love dining with you."

A few minutes after half past seven the house phone in Marilyn's room rang and a voice that quickened her already racing pulse said, "This is Bruce Gordon. I'm downstairs in the lobby."

"Oh yes, Mr. Gordon, I'll be down at once."

Marilyn rushed back to the mirror to complete her toilet. She was wearing the black frock of the night before and a chic little pillbox of a hat, black and saucy, accenting the copper-red in her hair. The hat had been a hasty and reckless purchase on her way home from the office. It was the first money she had spent for herself from her Clara prize award, aside from actual necessities. But tonight she wanted to be bright and gay and attractive, and what can better make a woman feel bright, gay and attractive than a smart new bonnet?

Marilyn had returned to her room in the hotel to find it empty save for a maid quickly engaged in trying to bring order out of chaos. Clara had left clothing strewn about, and toiletries scattered over bureau and tables. Talcum dust and soiled towels littered the floor.

"The young lady who was here," Marilyn inquired, setting to work at once to help the fuming servant who was at no pains to conceal her contempt, "she has gone?"

"That she has," snapped the maid, "an' good riddance to bad rubbish. Her ringin' for service ever' other minit, orderin' this 'n' orderin' that, shoutin' at myself, she did, because she couldn't get in them clothes in the closet on account of them bein' so small so's she couldn't pry 'em even with a shoehorn. So then she sent to her own hotel an' a maid from there brung her clothes. An' she left without as much as a thank-ya after turnin' this place down-side up till you'd think wild horses'd been troppin' in it."

"I'm sorry," Marilyn said. "I'll help with the room and pay you for your trouble. What time did Clara—the young woman leave?"

"Near 4 of the afternoon I'd say it was." The maid was mollified. "Right after she'd called up some man on the phone. What he said made her so hoppin' mad she threw a hairbrush under the bed an' stomped her feet an' then she sailed out like she was a queen 'stead of nothin' but a huzzy—begging your pardon, miss."

Marilyn thought, "I should excuse myself to Bruce—to Mr. Gordon. I should go on trying to get hold of Clara, trying to help her get hold of herself. Maybe if I begged him to help me, to help Clara—"

But indignation over Clara's unbelievable behavior—indignation and a disquieting urge to sit across a table from a tall young man with sun in his hair and flecks of light in his eyes, these were stronger, tonight, than a sisterly sense of duty.

When Marilyn stepped from an elevator, Bruce Gordon hurried forward to take her arm. The touch of his hand on her elbow was friendly, comforting. He knew the exact proportions of courtesy and intimacy necessary to put a girl at her ease.

"This is sporting of you, Miss Marsh," he greeted her. "It was cheeky of me to ask you to share your evening with me but—well, I wanted a part of it so very much, and the question just popped out before I could do anything about it. Have you a favorite eating spot, by the way?"

"No favorites," Marilyn said. She felt warm and safe and exultant. "I'm a stranger in the city, you know. I'm glad the invitation popped before you could get it under control."

"We'll make better time in a taxi," Bruce Gordon said, handing Marilyn into a cab. "I've an idea for you, to take or reject as you like. Martino is feeling much better; in fact, he is sitting up. I thought you might like to stop and pay him a call. I've arranged to have the doctor stand by for a while in case you decide to honor us. He is there now and will wait until he hears from me."

"Oh, could we?" anxiously. "I've felt terribly about not being able to see Al. It was my fault, his being hurt. He went to the Blue Parrot to help me—about Clara—he might have been badly hurt, even killed. He's such a real friend, so loyal and—and—well, Al is just about the best friend a girl could have."

"Friend?" The question was made to sound like a casual one, but there was deeper meaning behind it.

"Why yes," Marilyn went on enthusiastically. The deeper meaning had escaped her. "You saw what happened in the Blue Parrot. I couldn't have gone there alone. I had to find Clara. Poor Al! Being my friend hasn't brought him much luck, has it? A near-broken head—it's pretty high price to pay—for friendship."

"Thanks," Bruce Gordon said cryptically, and drew Marilyn's hand through his arm. "At least I hope—I understand. Here we are. I'll have the taxi wait. The doctor says you're to stay only a few minutes. Poor devil got quite a shock."

The taxi drew up before a tall building with stone balustrades just off Fifth avenue. Inside luxury was so restrained it was almost severe. The elevator ascended noiselessly, and Marilyn was in a spacious room of leathers and rich dark woods and deep chairs that invited. A pungency of fine tobacco was in the air. She judged there must be hundreds of books in comfortable disarray lining the walls.

"May I present Dr. Lentz," Bruce Gordon introduced a spare little man with thick pince nez astride his nose. "Miss Marsh, Dr. Lentz. How's the patient?"

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—You may be inclined to save some radical or strange notions previous to 2:40 p. m., that you will want to put into effect immediately, but it will be to your advantage to be content with affairs as they are, and not strain at the leash. Not a good period to rush matters at this particular time.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—The entire day and until midnight looks to be a lazy day filled with indecisions. New beginnings, no matter how carefully planned, are likely to become involved and do not carry through as planned. A good day to stick to routine.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—You can obtain a more exact and permanent status in your desires today, for you will feel a steadiness that favors deliberate action. An excellent day for matters connected with the ground, banking, education, sports, law.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—An auspicious day for creative and artistic work, for doing something connected with your hobby, such as getting others interested in it, or possibly making some real strides in your avocation.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—Today suggests caution in mispending your energies. That is, doing a lot of running around only to meet with disappointments. An excellent day to stick to routine.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—An excellent day for making decisions, dealings with superiors, for handling legal matters, and for starting new ventures.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—All you do today needs thought and plenty of it, to avoid haste and impulsiveness. High pressure may work, but will likely result in confusion or irritation.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—Previous to 8:41 a. m., suggests added caution where traveling is concerned. Between 9:41 a. m. and 2:03 p. m., favors general business, buying and selling. The afternoon and evening hours favor social matters and sports.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—Be deliberate and careful in your activities today. You are likely to have strong impulses to start something, but unless you are careful, impulse will overcome reason. A good day to stick to routine.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—The period previous to 7 p. m. is especially auspicious for asking favors, contacting superiors and dealings with those in important positions. After 7 p. m., avoid a feeling of extravagance and over exuberance.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—The entire day and evening favors dealings with influential people, writing, changes, conferences. An excellent period to start new ventures.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—A feeling of friendliness should pervade activities before 12:28 noon. Therefore you may expect helpfulness from associates, friends, superiors and subordinates. After 12:28 noon does not especially favor new and untried ideas.

DRAMA—True love runs smoothly right into plenty of excitement as the curtain rises on "One Mystery, Coming Up" at the "Little Theater Off Times Square" when "First Nighter" opens its eleventh season over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Linda, played by Barbara Lud- dy, is late for her wedding to Bill, played by Les Tremayne, and the melancholy minister considers it a bad omen. A lovers' quarrel ensues over a night club that Linda has inherited, and the wedding is off. Threat of sudden death, romance and intrigue are mingled in this comedy by Jean Russ Kern. Eric Sagerquist directs first curtain and intermission music.

MUSICAL—Lanny Ross will sing his own composition, "On Guard, America," in its first rendition on

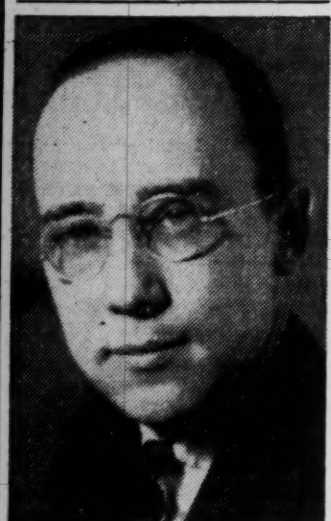

Chaufeur Impaled

On Iron Post in Fall
George Wright, 37-year-old Negro chauffeur, was killed instantly late yesterday afternoon when he was impaled on an iron fence post after accidentally falling from the second floor balcony of a garage apartment at the rear of 220 Fourteenth street, N. E.
Police said the Negro resided in the rear of 220 Fourteenth street.

Perkins Cites 9,000,000 Gain In Employment

Reports Wage Earners, Business 'Co-operating Wholeheartedly.'

BOSTON, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Secretary of Labor Perkins, reporting an increase of more than 1,000,000 in non-agricultural employment in the last year, asserted today that "this employment is some 9,000,000 greater than it was seven years ago, exclusive of some 2,000,000 additional men and women engaged on WPA."

She forecast that employment and payrolls would "continue to rise in the coming months as industries expand under the comprehensive defense program."

In a Labor Day message, Miss Perkins reported at the same time that the year had seen "a marked improvement in industrial relations" and that wage earners and business were "co-operating wholeheartedly" in carrying out defense tasks.

She disclosed that her department had initiated an industrial accident-prevention campaign to reduce "labor wastage through work injuries on defense jobs."

The secretary said a group of experts in accident prevention, appointed special agents by the department, stood ready to go into shops and factories at request, "appraising existing health and safety exposures and giving to management detailed advice as to how to correct or control these exposures."

Yugoslavs Demonstrate As Food Prices Soar

BELGRADE, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Hundreds of persons demonstrated in Belgrade, Zagreb, Dubrovnik and other Yugoslav cities today following increases in food prices. Several were injured at Split in a clash with police.

Price increases were said to be the result of shortages due to large exports to Germany and Italy.

Quarter Acre in Vidalia Grosses Owner $1,356

VIDALIA, Ga., Sept. 2.—A number of interesting stories of yield per acre on land used for tobacco culture have been told during the tobacco season.

LeRoy Cullens, of Vidalia, put a quarter acre at the corner of First and Darden streets to use as a filling station stand. He lined up a tobacco buying firm as a customer, and grossed $1,356 on his small plot from that one customer. He has plenty of other customers, too. The big purchaser of gas was engaged in transporting Vidalia tobacco purchases to North Carolina dry houses, and used 6,780 gallons of gasoline in 12 business days.

Two Air Raid Alarms Sound in Swiss Capital

BERN, Switzerland, Sept. 2.—(AP)—Two air raid alarms sounded in this Swiss capital last tonight. Alarms, occasioned by British planes bound to and from Italian objectives, have become almost a nightly commonplace in this Alpine country.

ANTI-RABIES DRIVE

SPARTA, Ga., Sept. 2.—With one farm mule and several dogs dead of a mauling believed to be rabies, Dr. I. H. Moore, head of the local health demonstration, and County Agent J. D. Dyer have combined their efforts in a movement to prevent further animal deaths. Inoculations have been ordered.

JAILED IN SHOOTING

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Sept. 2.—A Negro listed by Sheriff Arthur Bell as N. C. Carter was arrested yesterday in connection with the Saturday night shooting of Garland Reynolds, Gainesville market operator. Bell quoted Reynolds as saying Carter, a former employee, accosted him in his yard, and that a scuffle and the shooting ensued. Reynolds was not seriously wounded.

Marietta Rites Georgia Youth Conducted for Killed on Way R. E. Butler, 78 To Join Army

Former Banker Died at Acworth Residence Sunday.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. MARIETTA, Ga., Sept. 2.—Rites were held in a local chapel today for R. E. Butler, 78, retired banker, landowner and business leader here for 46 years, who died at his Acworth home yesterday after several months' illness.

Dr. I. A. White and the Rev. George F. Brown officiated, and interment was in City cemetery here.

Mr. Butler moved to Marietta from Douglasville. At various times he was in the banking business, was a real estate dealer, and headed the Butler Marble Company as president for many years. He was formerly president of the Marietta Farmers' and Merchants' Bank, and served as director of the First National Bank here. He retired several years ago and had made his home in Acworth.

He was the father of Carl Butler, mayor of Acworth.

Mr. Butler was a Shriner and member of other fraternal organizations, and was a member of the Marietta Baptist church.

He was married in 1888 to Miss Beulah Phillips, of Acworth, who survives him. Other survivors include seven daughters, Mrs. H. E. Nottingham, of Macon; Mrs. Orlando Arvey II, of Acworth; Mrs. J. R. Lindley, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. R. K. Hasty, of Smyrna; Mrs. F. M. Powell, of Atlanta; Mrs. Edward Perry, of Marietta; and Mrs. H. W. Healey, of Jacksonville, Fla., and three sons, Ralph Butler, of Dallas; Carl Butler, of Acworth, and Dan Butler, of Largo, Fla.

Dr. E. C. Seawright, Fayetteville, Dies

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. FAYETTEVILLE, Ga., Sept. 2.—Dr. E. C. Seawright, 59, native of Atlanta and for 33 years a practicing physician here, died in an Atlanta hospital early today.

Dr. Seawright came to Fayetteville shortly after his graduation from Emory University. He was for many years prominent in civic affairs here and served several terms as mayor of Fayetteville. Surviving are his father, James R. Seawright, of Atlanta; his wife, Mrs. Lois Brown Seawright; two daughters, Mrs. Jack Day, of Athens, and Mrs. Lee Hutchison, of Jonesboro; and three brothers, H. B. Seawright, of Jacksonville, Fla., and C. E. and T. E. Seawright, of Savannah.

Rites will be held in Fayetteville Methodist church at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. W. J. DeBardeleben, of Atlanta, and the Rev. G. C. Burtz, of Fayetteville, officiating. Interment will be in a local cemetery.
